CZAR DECREES REFORMS

Orders Freedom of Religion Throughout Russia.

MEASURES TO AID PEASANTS

Partial Local Self-Government to be Established—The Decree Hailed as Proclaiming a New Era.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 12.—The Czar has issued a decree providing for freedom of religion throughout his dominions, establishing to some degree local self-government, and making other concessions to the Village Committees.

The decree, which was issued to-day in commemoration of the anniversary of the birthday of Alexander III., is considered to be the most significant act of state since the emancipation of the serfs.

The text of the decree is as follows:

"On ascending the throne of our ancestors by the Providence of God we made a solemn vow before the Almighty and our conscience sacredly to guard the centuries-old pillars of Russian power and to dedicate our life to the service of our beloved fatherland in indefatigable solicitude for our subjects. We chose, in order to assure the well-being of our people, the way indicated by the memorable deeds of our predecessors, especially our never-to-be-forgotten father. God pleased to interrupt the deeds of our father by his early death, and thus laid on us the sacred duty of completing the consolidation of order and truth begun by him in conformity with the exigencies of national life.

"The troubles agitating our country, which to our deep regret have partly been sown by designs hostile to the State and partly engendered by doctrines foreign to Russian life, hinder the general work of ameliorating the well-being of our people. These troubles confuse the public mind, remove the people from productive labor, and often ruin families dear to our heart and young energies, among high and low, necessary to the internal development of the country.

"In demanding the fulfillment of this our will, while remaining strongly opposed to any violation of the normal course of national life and having confidence that all will loyally discharge their local duties, we are irrevocably decided to satisfy the needs for which the State has become ripe, and have deemed it expedient to strengthen and decree the underlying observances of the principles of tolerance laid down by the fundamental laws of the Russian Empire, which, recognizing the Orthodox Church as the ruling one, grant to all our subjects of other religions and to all foreign persuasions freedom of creed and worship in accordance with other rites. And we are further resolved to continue the active carrying out of measures for the improvement of the material position of the Orthodox rural clergy, while enabling them to take a larger share in intellectual and public life.

REVISION OF RURAL LAWS.

"In accordance with impending measures for the consolidation of the national economy, the efforts of the State credit institutions and especially the nobles' and peasants' banks, should be directed to strengthening and developing the welfare and fundamental pillars of Russian village life and that of the local nobility and peasantry.

"These principles marked out by us for the revision of the laws of the rural populations are, when formulated, to be referred to the Provincial Government Councils, so that with the assistance of persons enjoying the public's confidence they may be further developed and adapted to the special conditions of individual localities. In every case the fundamental principle of the inviolability of communal property is to be maintained, while at the same time means are to be found to render it easier for the individual to sever connection with the community to which he belongs, if he so desires.

"Without delay measures must be taken to release the peasants from the present burdensome liability of forced labor.

"Thorough reform is to be effected in the provincial Governments and district administrations, the local representatives, while attention will be devoted to securing closer co-operation between the communal authorities and parochial Trustees of the orthodox churches wherever possible.

"Going on the subject of our desire to co-operate in strengthening the moral foundations of family, school, and public life, under which alone the well-being of the people and the confidence of every one in the stability of his rights can develop, we commend our Ministers and Chief Officials concerned in this matter to submit to us their views regarding the execution of our intentions.

"The extension of self-government to the smaller communities, corresponding to the township organization of the peasantry, is regarded as a great victory for the Zemstvos (District and Provincial Assemblies), while the retention of the communal system with greater freedom of withdrawal therefrom meets the wishes of the peasantry, expressed in numbers, even though the local committees on agricultural depression.

"The Czar's desire for the co-operation of the educated public closely follows the action of Alexander III. at the time of the emancipation movement.

JOYFUL EXCITEMENT IN RUSSIA

The publication of the decree has produced a universal feeling of joyful excitement, and is to-night the chief topic of conversation in every public resort. It is generally attributed to the Emperor's earnest desire to remove the causes which reproduced such deplorable outbreaks among the workmen and students.

Hopes, however, are expressed that the powerful party of reaction led by the Minister of the Interior, M. de Plehve, may delay or frustrate the realization of the Czar's aspirations, but great hopes are based on the known fact that Finance Minister de Witte is a strong advocate of whatever reforms he considers the country ripe for. In any case, months must elapse before the projected reforms can be put into execution.

It is understood that the Czar desires to modify the laws by relaxing the penalties against dissenters like the Stundists, but that no attempt will be made to repeal the law compelling children to be brought up in the Orthodox Church unless both parents belong to some other denomination.

One of the most welcome reforms outlined is the enabling the sober and hard-working individual peasant to escape from the responsibility for arrears of taxation incurred by intemperate and lazy fellow-villagers. Many other abuses of the communal system which pressed heavily on the peasantry will be removed.

The paragraph in the decree proposing to refer the reforms to the provincial Government Councils is by many regarded as pointing in the direction of constitutional government.

It is conjectured that the Czar is willing to enlarge the sphere of the Zemstvos by permitting them to deliberate on matters of local administration. In this connection, however, it must be remembered that even last year M. de Plehve strongly resented, and in some cases punished, those invited to Governmental conferences who were bold enough to touch on the need of legislative reforms. It is remarked that the decree does not mention the removal of the restrictions on the press.

For the moment, however, among the general public all these difficulties are forgotten in the spirit of thankfulness at the prospect of the dawn of a new era.

GERMAN VIEWS OF THE EDICT.

Inspired Press Offers Nothing but Praise of the Czar—Liberal Papers Critical.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—The Czar's manifesto, says the Berlin correspondent of The Times, excites the greatest interest in Germany. As in regard to everything concerning the policy of "our Eastern neighbor," the inspired press offers nothing but praise, recalling the obsequious comments which greeted the Czar's eirenicon in spite of the views generally held in Germany in regard to arbitration.

But, the correspondent says, the courtly phrases of the North German Gazette, which talks of "the Czar's sublime conception of duty," and the Berlin Post's reference to his Majesty's God-fearing sentiments and his championship of the moral foundations of life, are not echoed in the Liberal press, which regards the manifesto critically in its social and political aspects.

The Liberal papers take note of the growth of the progressive policy favored by M. de Witte, contrasting it with the reactionary tendencies of M. de Plehve, but they say that the language of the manifesto verges on timidity, and that it shows there will be no sudden changes.

It is declared by the Liberal newspapers that the institution of the community of village property, which is the root of all the evil in Russia, is untouched, but that, though the Czar cannot make a bargain with Radicalism, the party of progress is strengthened, and there is no danger that it will be driven by despair into the arms of the revolutionaries.

THE INQUIRY COMMITTEES.

How M. de Plehve, the Minister of the Interior, Tried to Hamper Them.

The system under which the committees formed by the Czar's order some time ago for the purpose of examining into the needs of the Russian peasantry are to present their conclusions is an elaborate one. The work has by this time passed from the local to the provincial committees, which, presided over by the Provincial Governors, are now examining the material submitted to them by the village bodies. The provincial committees in turn will draw up reports which are to be submitted to the central committee, of which M de Witte, the Minister of Finance, and a man regarded as the strongest statesman in Russia, is Chairman.

The Czar's edict will be regarded as a great victory for such of his counselors as possess liberal ideas, and as a corresponding defeat for the reactionaries among them, of whom M. de Plehve, the Minister of the Interior, is the most prominent. It was this Minister who attempted, by every means in his power, to prevent the local committees from making recommendations on, or even discussing, political questions, though of course these questions cannot be disassociated from any inquiry into means to improve the condition of the people.

Many of the committees ignored M. de Plehve's representations and threats, with the result that members of some of these bodies are now in prison.

Almost every report that has been sent from Russia in regard to the probable results of the work of the committees has been disproved by the news from St. Petersburg published to-day. As late as Feb. 28, a letter from "a well-known and influential nobleman," printed in The London Times, said:

"M. de Plehve has given strict orders (of course, confidentially) to all the Governors to cause the committees to give the most innocent and empty replies to the points submitted to them, to prevent the discussion of any serious or far-reaching questions, and on no account to permit the discussion in the provincial committees of such recommendations of the local committees as the Minister of the Interior regards as 'Liberal' and therefore undesirable. M. de Plehve has succeeded in discrediting in the Emperor's eyes the work of the district committees. These committees * * * included a number of enlightened and independent men, so that many local committees took their work very seriously, went to the root of the question, and recommended reforms which they considered necessary for the country, without which in their opinion there could be no improvement in the state of agriculture.

"The Minister of the Interior regards these reforms as 'Liberal' and therefore as objectionable. He has succeeded in persuading his Majesty that such committees are in the minority, that there are very few of them, that they have acted under the influence of the few incorrigible and irresponsible Liberals, that there is nothing serious in it all, and that the provincial committees representing the more responsible elements in the provinces will not give expression to such opinions.

"Now, if the provincial committees were to express their views with the same complete freedom as the district committees, that would constitute a very serious manifestation, a plebiscite which would give the Emperor food for reflection. It would then no longer be possible to disguise the fact that the country desires and demands reforms. The provincial committees, sitting under the chairmanship of the Governors, completely dependent on them, and consisting of the most important elements in the country, are almost official institutions and cannot be described as revolutionary assemblies.

"Moved by these considerations, M. de Plehve has given stringent orders to the Governors, his subordinates, to do all in their power to prevent the adoption of any 'Liberal' resolutions whatever. The main efforts are directed toward preventing the discussion of questions raised by the district committees which they regard as 'Liberal.'"

The Times's correspondent at St. Petersburg, in sending the letter of which the foregoing is part, said:

"It is often alleged that the discontent in Russia is not serious, and that changes in the existing state of things are only demanded by half-educated students and disappointed literary and professional men. In many dispatches to The Times I have endeavored to expose the falsity of this view, and it is in order to show how groundless it is that I have obtained permission to make use of the letter from which I have given such copious extracts. That letter was written, not by a student or disappointed literary man, but by a nobleman of high standing and considerable wealth, a man who belongs to a distinguished family and mixes in the best Russian society."

MR. PLATT IGNORED; GOV. ODELL MASTER

Senator Not Consulted About the State Tax Programme.

Belief in Albany That Mr. Odell Absolutely Dominates in State Affairs—Col. Dunn Acts in Harmony with Him.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—The political aspect of the Senatorial and Assembly caucuses held here Tuesday night and last night, respectively, absorbed the attention of the legislators to-day. To those who are interested in State politics the caucuses seem to have had a far-reaching significance.

It is generally admitted that Gov. Odell dominated both caucuses completely. It now seems that he was able to do so, not because of any understanding with Senator Platt, but utterly regardless of him. The impression which prevails among the politicians here is that as a result of his achievements in the past two days Gov. Odell is now the absolute master of the political situation in the State.

The belief is that the Platt men have recognized that they could no longer postpone the inevitable, and that they have yielded their allegiance to the Governor in all matters concerning State affairs.

A statement attributed to Senator Platt in a Washington dispatch that he considered the proposed increase in the excise tax inadvisable and inexpedient led to interesting political gossip. The question was asked on all sides: Did the caucuses act without consultation with Platt, or if he was consulted, were his wishes ignored?

When the supposed statement of Senator Platt was shown to State Chairman Dunn and he was asked for an explanation, he said that it was true that Senator Platt's personal views on the question of increasing the excise tax were not in accord with the action of the caucuses. He intimated, however, that there would be no friction over the matter; that when Senator Platt thoroughly understood the situation which confronted the Republicans in the Legislature he would acquiesce in the caucus conclusions. As to whether the Senator had been consulted about Gov. Odell's proposals Col. Dunn was reticent.

Senator Raines, the reputed Platt leader in the Senate, was more communicative. He said that a wrong inference had been drawn from his remarks yesterday about the conferences on the Governor's tax bills. He did not mean to convey the impression that Senator Platt had been consulted about them and had given his consent to the programme adopted by the caucus.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Raines, "Senator Platt was not consulted about the matter, so far as I know, and his views were not communicated to those who took part in the caucus to my knowledge."

From other Senators who participated in the caucus the point in Senator Platt's name was not mentioned. No information was asked by any Senator as to how Mr. Platt might regard the mortgage tax or excise propositions, and none was volunteered by Col. Dunn or any one else. Mr. Platt's attitude apparently gave no one any concern.

POSITION OF COL. DUNN.

It is possible that the fact that Col. Dunn attended the caucus and that it was known to most of the Senators present that he not only favored both the mortgage tax and excise propositions but had been in frequent consultation with the Governor on these subjects during the past ten days, may have given to those Senators who heretofore have been closely allied with Senator Platt the impression that all that was being done had the unreserved indorsement of the senior Senator. The statements made here by Col. Dunn and Senator Raines, coupled with the dispatches from Washington, removed any such impression.

The change in the attitude of the Platt men toward the Governor has not been brought about in two days. For two weeks there have been signs of the Governor's growing prestige which have not escaped the attention of the observant.

A month ago the relations between the Governor and Col. Dunn were strained almost to the breaking point because Mr. Odell refused to reappoint Mr. Dunn's friend, Col. Ashley Cole, Railroad Commissioner. Col. Dunn went so far in the expression of sentiment as to make threats to resign his own place on the Railroad Commission.

Instead of resigning he has become resigned. His resentment toward the Governor has been turned into cordiality. He has been in almost daily consultation with the Governor for the last week. The Governor and Col. Dunn into his confidence on legislation and succeeded not only in making the State Chairman an advocate of these plans, but enlisted his aid in their perfection and execution.

Whatever may be Senator Platt's attitude toward the Governor's proposals, therefore, that of Col. Dunn admits of no question. He has willingly assumed his share of the responsibility for the Governor's legislative programme. If he had not fully informed Senator Platt of what was being projected and solicited his views, it has been because he did not care to do so, not because he has not had time for full consultation with the Senator. He has been fully in the Governor's confidence for two weeks.

When Gov. Odell was to-day shown the dispatch stating that Senator Platt was opposed to the excise tax his only comment was that he knew nothing about it.

The fact that there were only 77 votes in last night's caucus of the Assembly led to the impression in some quarters that the action of the caucus might not be final inasmuch as it requires 76 votes to pass a bill in the assembly. Speaker Nixon and other leaders said, however, that the nine Republican members who had been excused were all pledged to stand by the decision of the caucus.

The Republican leaders do not attempt to conceal the fact that in the excise tax bill which was introduced to-day they think they have executed a good stroke against the Democrats. According to the figures of the Excise Commissioner there are 11,281 liquor tax certificates held in New York City. Commissioner Cullinan and Senator Raines, the author of the existing excise law, say that they figure that the fifty per cent. increase in the tax will reduce the number of certificates ten per cent.

This would mean that there would be more than 1,100 fewer liquor certificates held in Greater New York under the proposed law than there are at present. It is estimated that the reduction in saloons would be about 900.

"That means 900 less Democratic headquarters," was the comment of one of the prominent Republican leaders on these figures.

GOV. ODELL DEFENDS HIS PLAN.

Gov. Odell said to-day that the assertion that the Republican party would lose votes and public support by increasing this tax was ridiculous.

"Every decent, law-abiding citizen in the State is aware by this time, he said," that the present liquor law, if it has done nothing else, has at least succeeded in reducing greatly the number of places where liquor is sold, has driven out of business thousands of places that were menaces to public morals and has succeeded in reducing our prison population and diminishing crime. It is often stated, without figures to prove, it, that the so-called 'Raines law' hotels have increased in number yearly. That is absolutely untrue, for here are the actual figures in three of the boroughs of Greater New York:

"On June 1, 1900, there were 1,910 declared hotels in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx. On the same date in 1901 there were only 1,335, a reduction of 30 number in 1900. In June, 1900, there were 1,360, an increase of only 25 over 1901, but still a decrease of 29 per cent. from the number in 1900. In June, 1901, there were 1,694 declared hotels in the Borough of Brooklyn, and on the first day of June, 1901, there were 852, a reduction of 50 per cent. On June, 1902, there were 726, a reduction of 56 per cent. from the number of 1900.

"Now, take the criminal statistics since the present law went into effect and it will be found that the number of commitments for drunkenness has fallen from 53,200 in 1897 to 33,203 in 1901, a reduction of nearly 40 per cent., and it further appears that the commitments for assaults, robbery, and burglaries have materially diminished. In 1895 there was 3,720 commitments to the various prisons of the State for these crimes. In 1900 there were only 2,442. This diminution is a gradual one which has taken place during the operation of the liquor tax law.

"Taking the year 1890, under the old license law, it will be found that in a period of five years, 1890-1895, there was a steady increase of almost 100 per cent. in assaults and 23 per cent. in robberies and burglaries. From the prison officials of the State it can be easily learned that the number of criminals confined in 1890 was 3,508, increasing until 1895, when it reached 3,721, but diminishing through the years since the passage of the present law.

"Reasoning from analogy, it was to be expected that the criminal statistics would steadily increase during the whole decade, even as they did during its first five years. But it is perfectly evident that some great restraining and corrective force made itself felt during the last half of the period, producing these surprisingly improved results. There is no doubt in my mind that it came from the diminution of the number of drinking places and the exercise of a proper State supervision. Under the proposed amendment I believe that a still further betterment of the moral conditions of the communities will result."

ATTITUDE OF THE MINORITY.

Senator Grady, the minority leader, who in past years has been an advocate of a mortgage tax, when asked to-day what his attitude would be on the proposed Mortgage Tax bill, said:

"I am going to soak it. If revenue is to be raised from indirect sources why not put a tax on the acquisition of property, instead of on the loss of it? Why not tax stock transfers and have the man who buys the stock contribute to the State rather than mortgages, and put an additional burden upon the man who is unfortunate enough to have to borrow money? No; that would be hitting 'our friends,' and would be a violation of the agreement made last November. Well, we will have something to say on that subject when the time comes."

Senator George E. Green of Binghamton, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, who will have charge of the Mortgage Tax bill in the Senate, said to-day:

"The letters which I have received by the scores on the mortgage tax indicate very clearly two things—first, that much of the opposition arises from confusing it with the conveyance tax proposition, which the caucus definitely abandoned, and second, that the objections to the mortgage tax itself are due to a misunderstanding of the question which will disappear in the full discussion which will be held upon the measure.

"I am glad to say that I am unreservedly in favor of the proposition myself. I believe the mortgage tax is practicable, sound in economics, and right from the standpoint of justice."

MANY DARING RESCUES IN TENEMENT FIRE.

Paralytic Who Forgot His Ailment Carried Down a Ladder—Family of Children Handed Up from a Fire Escape to the Roof.

A double-decker four-story tenement caught fire at 948 First Avenue a few minutes before 6 o'clock last evening and the flames spread so rapidly that the firemen had to rescue a dozen people by ladders while an entire family in the back of the house was rescued by pulling the children up from the fire escape to the roof and aiding the mother to climb a ladder to the roof.

The other inmates of the house, altogether numbering not less than a hundred, excitedly fled to the roof and fire escapes and got out safely. During the fire Anton Hofiman, who keeps a bakery in the basement, got into a fight over an old grudge with an employe, Henry Kenalte, and hit him in the jaw. He was arrested, and an ambulance surgeon attended the injured man. The fire did about $8,000 damage.

A passer-by saw the fire and sent in an alarm. The firemen immediately sent in a second alarm. Smoke quickly filled the house and cut off the escape by way of the stairs on the bottom floor, though a few people were enabled to get out that way in the first few minutes.

James McKenna, a paralytic who spends nearly all his life in an invalid's chair, lived on the second floor with his wife and two girls, five and seven years old. When the fire started the man was so frightened at the thought of being caught in his room and burned, because of his ailment, that he excitedly arose and made his way to the window, his mind apparently overpowering his paralysis. His wife was hysterical and the children, who stood at the window by their side, shrieked loudly and wept. People in the street pointed to them and the firemen saw them and directed their efforts to saving the family.

It was too late to get them out by way of the stairs, and ladders were put up. McKenna is a very heavy man, weighing over 200 pounds, and it was a ticklish job getting him down the narrow ladder. The children were taken down first, the mother insisting, and she ceased her hysterical cries while she saw the children being carried down, and she smiled as she saw them safe. Then she was helped down herself, the firemen guiding her. McKenna had to be carried, but firemen Stevens and Sytho of Truck 2, who rescued the family, managed to get down the ladder with him to the street, though they were exhausted for a few minutes.

Jacob Bann and his brother Henry, of 325 East Forty-eighth Street, saw that a lot of people on the upper floors were having trouble, and they ran to the roof of 950 First Avenue, where they saw a family of three children and the mother on the fire escape in the rear of the top floor. As we were going and showing what to do. The windows of the lower floors were belching smoke and made them afraid to descend that way, and they could not go back into their rooms for they would be suffocated there.

Jacob Bann dropped off the roof to the fire escape. Taking a child in his arms, he steadied himself against the side of the house with one hand and arm, and then with an effort of great strength, he lifted the child up and his brother caught it. He did the same thing with the other two children. Then he pulled up the ladder leading from the fire escape to that on the floor below, and put the ladder up to the roof. It was a dangerous undertaking for a woman to climb to the roof that way, and this woman was very nervous. But she had to do it, and nerved herself, and she fell backward over the edge of the roof to be sure she was safe when she got to the top.

JURY FOR FIREMAN'S WIDOW.

Special to The New York Times.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., March 12.—In the case of Mrs. Ella J. Sutton against the Ulster and Delaware Railroad Company, the jury returned a verdict this morning awarding the plaintiff $10,000. The action charged the railroad company with negligence.

Frank Sutton, husband of the plaintiff, was a locomotive fireman in the employ of the railroad. He was killed on Nov. 21, 1901, at Grand Hotel Station, in the Catskills, by escaping steam which filled the firebox of his engine. It is alleged that the engine's boiler was defective.

BROKEN WIRE KILLS MOTORMAN ON CAR

Electrocutes Him and Hurls His Body Under the Vehicle.

Dazzling Flame Temporarily Blinds the Onlookers and Illuminates Southern Boulevard Until the Power Is Shut Off.

By the snapping of the overhead trolley wire of the Union Railway Company, Willis Avenue line, in front of 585 Southern Boulevard, where the line passes under the elevated railroad, late last night the motorman of car No. 6 was instantly electrocuted, terribly burned, knocked off his platform, and ground under the car, his body raising the car off the track. It took half an hour to get the body out. The Alexander Avenue police telephoned to the Union Railway Company's Harlem office for the man's name, but it was refused. It was learned, however, that the man was John Jordan, thirty-five years old, of 331 East Fifty-ninth Street.

The Willis Avenue cars run down that avenue to the Southern Boulevard, and then turn to go to Third Avenue, running under the elevated railroad structure. Car No. 6 was about under it with one passenger—Daniel R. Mahoney of 122 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street—and the conductor, John O'Hare, of 1,172 East One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street, was on the back platform. The overhead wire, of thick copper, suddenly snapped apart from some as yet unascertained reason.

The wire fell across the rails, at the same time striking the motorman. A vast sheet of blue flame, which lit up the country for blocks around and attracted many people to the scene, flashed up from car, rails, wire, and motor box. The motorman fell across the dashboard and then down to the track.

Policeman Quirk of the Alexander Avenue Station, who was standing in front of the point where the accident occurred, said he was blinded for at least three minutes by the flash, though he remembers seeing the motorman fall forward. As soon as he had partly recovered, he looked to see where the motorman was, but could not discern his body. Mahoney said he was blinded for some seconds by the flash of light, but then ran out of the car. The conductor jumped off just ahead of him. The latter said he then looked for the motorman but could not see him.

The dazzling light flashed up again and again. The wire which had broken was giving off a white heat and at the same time emitting a steady bluish flame which helped to illumine the sky around. The car appeared to be ablaze with blue fire, yet did not seem to burn, and later was shown not to be damaged except underneath. The wire kept squirming for some minutes after the break, and no one dared go anywhere near it, as it was white hot and sputtering.

When the intensity of the light had somewhat subsided policemen and some of the company's employes tried to find the body of the motorman. They discovered it under the forward wheels of the car, where it had become wedged and stopped the vehicle. The car was raised with jacks, and Dr. Odell of the Lincoln Hospital, who had been summoned, pulled the body out.

Meanwhile Conductor O'Hare had telephoned to the power house and all the currents on the Willis Avenue line were shut off, thus stopping half the trolley traffic in the Bronx. O'Hare was arrested by Policeman Quirk as a "suspicious person." Coroner Berry immediately paroled the man in the custody of Inspector Murphy of the road.

Murphy refused to have anything to say about the accident, and when asked if the overhead wire which had parted was defective he walked away.

CRAMPS BORROW $4,000,000.

Consolidated Mortgage on Shipbuilding Plant to Meet Obligations Incurred in Government Work.

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—Banking interests of this city have about completed arrangements for a loan of $4,000,000 to the William Cramp & Sons' Ship and Engine Building Company. The loan is to be made on four series of 6 per cent. notes, one-quarter of the total being payable at successive five-year periods, making the total issue redeemable at the end of twenty years.

The notes will be secured by a consolidated mortgage on the plant. The loan was made to meet obligations to be incurred in carrying out Government and other contracts for which more than the sum named will be eventually received.

RUN ON A BUTTE BANK.

Unfounded Rumor Alarms Small Depositors of Savings Institution.

Special to The New York Times.

BUTTE, Mon., March 12.—Through a report that appears to have had no foundation a run on the State Savings Bank was started this morning. It was confined to small depositors, who were alarmed by a story to the effect that J. H. Creighton, the Omaha banker, who is a stockholder in the bank, had withdrawn his support from the institution. The bank to-day received a larger sum in deposits than it paid out.

Mr. Creighton telegraphed from Omaha that there was absolutely no foundation for the report concerning him. The rumor was also circulated that the Largey estate, which is interested in the bank, had withdrawn its money from the vaults. That story also was denied. The bank is enforcing the sixty-day clause in respect to time deposits. It is expected to issue a statement to-day personally guaranteeing the deposits in the bank of all employes of the Hennessy Company, and Eugene Carroll, manager of the Water Company, did the same. Better feeling prevails, and, although the doors of the bank were besieged this afternoon, it is not believed that the run will continue for long.

LASSOED MEN FROM DEATH.

Cowboy Draws Two Persons from a Swollen Nebraska Stream.

Special to The New York Times.

HARDY, Neb., March 12.—A cowboy named Wilson, by his clever use of the lasso, last night rescued two young men, Frank Hammitt and Harry Webster, from death in the Republican River. The river is a swollen flood, filled with ice. The young men were capsized out of a rowboat in midstream, and were swept away by the current. For a mile they kept above water by clinging to cakes of ice. As the current whirled them nearer the shore ropes were thrown to the youths, but the icy water having completely numbed their limbs, they were unable to grasp them.

Wilson came along on horseback, and, riding along the bank, threw his lariat. The rope unwound through the air, and a shout went up when it fell over the body of Hammitt. Wilson quickly turned his cow pony and drew the man to shore. He then repeated the performance with Webster.

VATICAN MAY BE CRIPPLED BY LOSS OF FRENCH FUNDS.

The Pope and His Entourage Are Said to Regard the Dispute with France with Absolute Terror.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—A letter in the Eclair by a well-informed writer on Vatican affairs is quoted by the Paris correspondent of The Times.

The writer in question declares that the Pope and his entire entourage regard the development of the conflict with France in regard to Bishops' nominations with absolute terror, partly because of the consequent withdrawal of French money from the Vatican.

"No more convents; no more pilgrimages; no more Peter's Pence—that is what makes Rome anxious in regard to the rupture of the Concordat," it is declared.

The letter goes on to say that hardly any money comes from Austria. Spain is without resources. The Hungarian and Bohemian ecclesiastics keep the revenues for themselves. Americans are more generous, but their gifts indicate rather an increase in the number than in the amount of the donations.

Without French funds, it is stated, the Pope cannot pay the Cardinals, or provide for the bureaus, his little army, or the colleges.

According to the writer in the Eclair there is only one solution of the difficulty—the Vatican must throw itself into Germany's arms.

Last year, on the nomination of the Bishops of Annecy and Carcassonne, the French Council of State, acting in accord with the French Government, refused to register the bulls investiture as long as the word "nobis" followed "nominavit." France claims the Vatican has been in the habit of inserting this word unwarrantably.

The Vatican, according to a recent dispatch from Rome, would not consent to eliminate "nobis," and then the French Premier, M. Combes, made nominations for three vacant Bishoprics, those of Bayonne, Constantine, and St. Jean de Maurienne, without any previous understanding with the Vatican as to its acceptance of the nominees, desiring to assert in this way the independent right of the French Government and the inutility of the word "nobis," which the Vatican insisted on maintaining.

On Feb. 24 a Paris news agency made the following announcement:

"The Vatican has resolved to adopt a purely passive attitude as regards French affairs. Cardinal Rampolla will make no proposal concerning the formula 'nobis nominavit.' He will wait for the French Government to propose a compromise, and if it fails to do so there will be no insistence to obtain the registering of the investiture. As for the appointment of the three Bishops without previous agreement, even if it were published in the (French) Journal Officiel, the Vatican would make no protest, but it would consider these appointments as null and void, and the three Bishops thus chosen in this irregular way would never be ordained."

The Vatican has decided not to depart under any pretext from this defensive attitude. The French Government has been duly informed. The Pope considers that he has nothing further to say, and declines all responsibility in the prolonged vacancy of the French dioceses.

JUSTICE DAY SERIOUSLY ILL, SUFFERS FROM PNEUMONIA.

Physician Declares His Attack Is "Moderately Severe," and a Consultation Will Be Held To-day.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—It was announced here to-night that Justice William R. Day of the United States Supreme Court is suffering from pneumonia. He has been confined to his apartments for several days, but no hint that he was seriously ill was given until to-day. After several reports had been denied, a bulletin was finally issued to-night by Dr. B. L. Haddin. It read:

"Judge Day has a moderately severe attack of pneumonia. He is very comfortable to-night, and his symptoms at present do not occasion alarm. Dr. Osler of Johns Hopkins University will see him in consultation to-morrow morning."

The friends of Justice Day are apprehensive concerning his condition. His temperature to-day was high, running up to the neighborhood of 105. He is not a man of robust physique, but frail, and it is feared he will not be able to withstand a severe attack of illness. His excellent habits and the careful nursing and medical attention he is receiving, however, count strongly in his favor.

Never a man of strong appearance, it was remarked when he came here to take his place on the bench of the Supreme Court that he seemed to be very much thinner than when in Washington as Secretary of State.

When Justice Day came here he was suffering from a cold. This was aggravated by the bad weather of last week, and he was compelled finally to take to his bed. It was said that he merely had a cold, but when Mrs. Day came on hurriedly from their home in Canton, accompanied by two of their sons, it was realized that his attack was likely to prove serious.

Dr. Haddin, when questioned during the day, admitted that Justice Day was a very sick man, but said that the case was only one of the grip. He denied that there were any well-defined symptoms of pneumonia. After Dr. Haddin had called in the early evening it was stated by a member of the family that the jurist's condition showed improvement. It was after Dr. Haddin's visit later that he issued the bulletin saying that Dr. Osler would be called into consultation.

Two sons, with Mrs. Day, are in constant attendance upon the patient, and two other sons, one at the University of Michigan, and the other at a school in Asheville, N. C., are being kept closely advised as to their father's illness.

Admiral Dewey was among the many friends who called to-day to inquire about Justice Day's condition.

EX-SENATOR JONES'S ILLNESS.

Hiccoughing from Which He Has Suffered Four Days Is Lessened.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12. — Ex-Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas has fallen a victim to the hiccoughing epidemic. For four days he has been confined to his home here in M Street with a severe attack of hiccoughing.

The physicians have been powerless to control the malady, and are handicapped by the danger possible in the use of strong remedies. The ex-Senator has been suffering also with insomnia.

It was said at his home late to-night that the family physician had somewhat restrained the hiccoughing, and Mr. Jones had been sleeping for a little time.

SENATORS AGREED ON BOTH TREATIES

Panama and Cuban Conventions Soon to Reach a Vote.

Final Action on the Canal Tuesday—Democrats Compel Consent to Submission of the Cuban Treaty to the House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Through agreements between the Democrats and Republicans way was cleared to-day for the ratification by the Senate of the Panama Canal treaty and the Cuban reciprocity treaty.

Senator Morgan's demand for permission to print his speeches against the canal treaty having been granted, it was possible to obtain an agreement for a vote. It was decided that all debate should be ended and the final vote on ratification should be taken. Democrats will support several proposals for amendments, but it is believed that these will be defeated and the convention will be ratified.

On the Cuban treaty the Democrats forced a concession that it must be finally ratified by both houses of Congress. The object of their demand was to make certain that there would be opportunity for full tariff discussion at the coming session of Congress. There will be debate at the special session of the Senate on the treaty, but it is expected that a final vote will not be long delayed.

CANAL TREATY AGREEMENT.

Senator Frye, (Rep., Me.) who had conducted the negotiations for the agreement on the canal treaty, arose in executive session soon after the Senate convened to-day and brought up the subject.

"I ask unanimous consent that the treaty with Colombia be open to general debate until Monday morning," he said. "That, beginning with the session of Monday next, the Senate will proceed to consider amendments that may be offered, and that upon each amendment speech shall be limited to fifteen minutes to each Senator, but that the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Chairman of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals shall be allowed thirty minutes on each amendment. That, after all amendments shall have been disposed of, one hour shall be allowed for general debate to the side supporting the treaty and that one hour shall be allowed to the opponents of the treaty. That, not later than Tuesday next, the vote upon the resolution for ratification shall be taken without further debate.

"That the injunction of secrecy shall then be removed from the speeches of Senator Morgan already printed and submitted to Senators, including that to be made by him on the response to the Senate resolution calling for information as to the agreement between the Panama Canal Company and our Government, and they shall be printed in The Record, and that the speech or speeches made for and against the ratification of the treaty during the hour of general debate allowed each side shall be printed in The Record in like manner as the speeches of Senator Morgan."

There was some discussion on this agreement, but it was adopted without dissent. Senator Morgan then yielded the floor.

It is understood there will be no amendments to the canal treaty, but the Democratic Senators desire that there should be a more definite agreement with Colombia as to the policing of the canal strip, and will urge that Senator Morgan's contention that the United States should have absolute control of the canal territory be made the basis of further negotiation.

They want Articles 4 and 23 of the treaty struck out. The former affirms the sovereignty of Colombia, and disavows on the part of the United States any intention to impair the sovereignty of Colombia in any manner.

The latter deals with the contingency of necessity for armed forces on the canal territory for the protection of the canal, the ships that use it, or the railway or the works connected with the canal, and imposes on Colombia the duty of providing such forces, with the proviso that in case Colombia cannot effectively comply with these requirements, then the United States, with the consent of Colombia, or at the request of that country, or of her Minister at Washington, shall employ such military force as may be necessary, and as soon as the necessity shall have ceased shall withdraw her forces.

The latter part of the section is believed by Republican Senators to provide amply against the injury of the canal property. It is as follows:

"Under exceptional circumstances, however, on account of unforeseen or imminent danger to said canal, railways, and other works, or to the lives and property of the persons employed upon the canal, railways, and other works, the Government of the United States is authorized to act in the interest of their protection, without the necessity of obtaining the consent thereunto of the Government of Colombia, and it shall give immediate advice of the measures adopted for the purpose stated, and as soon as sufficient Colombian forces shall arrive to attend to the indicated purpose those of the United States shall retire.

The further safeguard provided in the sixth article is cited as meeting the objections advanced against the shortcomings of the treaty in the way of securing control of the canal ground. This article provides that Colombia shall never cede or lease to any country, any ports, islands, harbors, or territory within or adjacent to the Bay of Panama, nor on the Atlantic Coast of Colombia between the Atrato River and the western boundary of the Department of Panama, for the purpose of establishing fortifications, coaling stations, military posts, docks, or other works that might interfere with the maintenance or protection of the canal.

The Republican Senators also argue that the canal will be cause for new bonds of affiliation between this country and the South American countries, and there can be no question of the common interest in protecting it and maintaining its neutrality either against any European power or against any South American country or Colombia herself. This view is accepted by many Democratic Senators as sufficient. When all the minor details are swept aside, as they will be by the limited debate Monday, the treaty probably will be adopted by an almost unanimous vote.

CUBAN TREATY AND THE HOUSE.

The amendment to the Cuban treaty adopted on the insistence of the Democrats reads:

the co-operation of the House had been secured.

Senator Teller discussed the merits of the treaty in detail, contending that it was a direct thrust at the sugar industry of the United States, and that its effect would be entirely in the interest of the Sugar Trust, which he asserted would be benefited to the extent of no less than $6,000,000 annually by the reduction of duties on raw sugar.

He also discussed at some length the amendment recommended by the Committee on Foreign Relations, which provides that the reduction on Cuban sugar during the life of the treaty shall not be more than 20 per cent, and that during this time there shall be no reduction on sugar imported from any other foreign country. He ridiculed the provision declaring that it had been inserted merely for the purpose of catching the votes of Senators from sugar-producing States. He asserted that it could have no possible effect in binding the Government of the United States if Congress should decree otherwise.

Senator Platt (Conn.) denied that the Sugar Trust would reap the benefit of the reduction proposed by the treaty. He said at this time he would not go into the question, but that he hoped at a later day to be able to cite facts which would convince the Senate that the contention was unfounded.

Senator Dietrich (Rep., Neb.) defended the amendment, but admitted that it could be repealed in the future. The moral effect of the inclusion of this provision in the treaty, he said, would be very great. He and some of the other beet sugar Senators had exerted their influence to have the amendment adopted by the committee, and his confidence in the provision was such that its acceptance or non-acceptance would determine his attitude on the final vote on the ratification of the treaty. Without the amendment he was opposed to the treaty; with it, he was for the treaty.

Democratic Senators regard the agreement to submit the treaty to both houses of Congress as of great political importance. Through this provision they will gain an opportunity for tariff debate next session, something they have been for days working to secure.

The expectation is that when the joint resolution is brought into the House the demand for debate will be so strong that the Republican leaders will be convinced and that no kind of rule can be employed to deprive the minority of their chance to attack the Dingley tariff.

The fact that the majority of the Republicans in the next House has been narrowed down to less than a dozen, and that it was in the Fifty-seventh Congress gives basis for the belief that the Democrats will try to fasten on the joint resolution a proposition to remove or reduce the differential tariff on refined sugar.

This was the plan pursued in the first session of the last Congress on the Cuban Reciprocity bill, over which there was such a long and bitter contention. The Senate declined to act on the bill, the beet sugar Senators being outclassed by the ultra-protectionists in blocking all action.

It is evidently the intention of the Democratic Senators to debate not only the sugar tariff when the joint resolution approving the treaty shall come from the House, but also other tariff schedules, and the debate will be unlimited. The session will be long one and there will be inducement to create complications for political effect, so that it will be many months before final action will be reached and the new tariff rates put into effect.

Senator Beard is the only Republican Senator at this time who is outspokenly determined to withhold his support from the Cuban treaty. He is a man of distinctly set opinions on public questions, and he is intensely and immovably loyal to his constituents in Ventura County, Cal., where, in the town of Oxnard, there is one of the largest beet sugar factories in the world, and the people of the vicinity are prosperous in the business of raising beets and making sugar. The California Senator does not go so far as to record against this industry. Furthermore, he is an annexationist, and is opposed to temporary dallying with the ultimate destiny of the island.

Senators Spooner, Hanna, and Allison labored for two hours this afternoon with Mr. Bard to persuade him to come into camp and give the treaty his vote. He declined to yield.

The amended treaty if ratified will require action by both Cuban Congress, but for that there is an abundance of time. There is little prospect that the President will call Congress in extra session to put the treaty in operation any earlier than next December. The final ratification will be enough for all practical purposes, as that concerns the relief of the commercial conditions of the island. Indeed, by some it is regarded as providential that the treaty should not go into effect at once with all the incidental disturbances of the market and the excitement of prices.

APPREHENSION IN HAVANA.

Business Men, Though Anxious for Ratification of Treaty, Would Prefer Its Rejection to Uncertainty.

HAVANA, March 12.—The publication of Washington dispatches regarding the amendments to the reciprocity treaty by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has caused a renewal of apprehension among business men that the treaty may remain unsettled until the next session of the United States Congress.

The merchants and bankers here hope that if the amendment requiring the approval of the House is adopted, President Roosevelt will call a special session of the House to settle the matter. The uncertainty regarding the rates of duties has seriously hampered both the export and import trade for several months. The merchants, although anxious for its ratification, now declare that even the rejection of the treaty is preferable to a further long period of uncertainty.

SUCCESSOR TO GEN. DUMONT.

George Uhler of Philadelphia to be Chief of the Steamboat Inspection Service.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—George Uhler of Philadelphia has been selected to succeed Gen. James A. Dumont as Supervising Inspector General of Steamboats, and will assume the office April 1. Gen. Dumont has held the position since 1876, and has been an efficient officer. He is seventy-nine years old, and the work of the steamboat inspection service has increased so largely in extent and character as to become too laborious for him. After consultation between Secretaries Shaw and Cortelyou it was determined to seek the services of a younger man.

Mr. Uhler is President of the Marine Engineer's Association of the United States, and a practical marine engineer of recognized ability. The steamboat inspection service will pass under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce and Labor on July 1, and, therefore, Secretary Cortelyou was consulted in making the selection of Mr. Uhler, who will continue under the new department. Mr. Uhler was recommended by Admiral Melville, Capt. Collins of the Revenue Cutter Service, and other expert marine engineers. Mr. Uhler knew nothing of the proposition to appoint him until the place was tendered to him. No politicians were consulted in the matter.

NOMINATED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. Roosevelt's Former Messenger One of Three Assistant Appraisers for New York.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the following nominations:

Assistant Appraisers of Merchandise in the District of New York—Amos M. Knapp, George Sawtor, and George Robinson.

Consul at Aden, Arabia—William Masterson, Kentucky.

There was considerable discussion in local political circles last night over the appointment of Amos M. Knapp, George Sawtor, and George Robinson as Assistant Appraisers for the Port of New York.

Mr. Knapp was messenger to Mr. Roosevelt when he was Governor and accompanied him on his Western trip when he was a candidate for Vice President.

Mr. Sawtor was at one time Consul at Antigua. He subsequently was appointed to a similar position at Quito in Ecuador, but returned on the same ship that took him there, because it is said he feared the yellow fever, which was then prevalent.

THE SENATE'S OPEN SESSION.

Change of Rules Limiting Debate is Proposed by Mr. Platt of Connecticut.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The open session of the Senate to-day lasted five minutes. Mr. Kean of New Jersey reported back favorably from the Committee on Contingent Expenses the resolution introduced yesterday by Senator Allison to authorize the Committee on Rules to sit during the recess for the purpose of examining the rules, and it was adopted.

In that connection Mr. Platt of Connecticut gave notice of a proposed modification of the rules by which the Senate at any time, by a three-fifths vote, could make an order fixing the time at which a vote should be taken upon any pending question and fixing the limit of time any Senator could occupy in debate pending such final vote. This proposition for cloture was in the form of a resolution. It was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Teller introduced the following resolution, which was allowed to lie on the table:

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee be directed to report to the Senate whether the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, can negotiate treaties with foreign Governments by which the duties levied by Congress on importations can be changed or abrogated.

The Senate agreed to a resolution offered by Mr. Hoar directing the Committee on Printing to ascertain and report the cost for each session of the last four Congresses of all documents other than executive or legislative documents printed by order of the Senate or by the request of individual Senators.

CRUM CASE TO GO OVER.

Senate Unlikely to Act, and President Will Appoint Negro to Serve During Recess.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—It is expected that the nomination of Dr. W. D. Crum to be Collector of the Port of Charleston, S. C., would be considered at the regular meeting of the Commerce Committee held to-day. It was discovered, however, that a sufficient number of Republican members favorable to the nomination were not present to warrant its consideration. Of the eight Republican members only three were present, Messrs. Frye, Depew, and Perkins. The four Democratic members, Messrs. Berry, Martin, Clay, and Mallory, were present and prepared to fight against reporting the nomination.

Mr. Perkins was one of the two Republicans who voted against confirmation at the last session, and had a vote been taken to-day he doubtless would have again recorded himself in the negative. There was no suggestion at the meeting in regard to Dr. Crum's nomination, and it is believed there is a tacit understanding that the nomination is to go over without action. In that event the nomination would fail, and would have to be renewed at the December session.

A majority of the committee is favorable to confirmation, but the minority is determined to contest the nomination at every stage, and the Republicans do not care to bring on that kind of a fight at this time. Dr. Crum will be appointed by the President to serve during the recess if the Senate fails to act.

PRESIDENT'S WESTERN TOUR.

May Leave Washington Soon After April 1, Not to Return Until June—Little Hunting Contemplated.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Senators Long of Kansas and Hopkins of Illinois and Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow, also of Kansas, talked with the President to-day about his Western tour. The Kansas citizens are urging the President to make some stops in their State after the dedication of the exposition grounds on April 30. Only one stop thus far has been arranged. The President has accepted an invitation to attend a meeting of the railway branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, to be held at Topeka on May 1.

Few other details of the itinerary have been worked out. It has been decided with practical definiteness that only one trip will be made. While no date for the beginning of the trip can be determined definitely until the Senate shall have adjourned, it is expected now that it will be not later than April 1.

After leaving Washington, the President will not return to Washington until some time in June. It is likely that the first two or three weeks of the trip will be passed principally in the Yellowstone Park. There the President will seek rest and recreation, but it is understood that he will do little hunting.

J. P. MORGAN IN WASHINGTON.

He Has a Half Hour's Conference with the President—Senator Hanna a Guest at Dinner.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—J. Pierpont Morgan and his party, consisting of his daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Markoe, and two other friends of Miss Morgan, arrived in Washington shortly before noon to-day from Jekyl Island. The party is stopping at the Arlington.

Mr. Morgan called at the White House in the afternoon and held a conference with the President. He was alone and remained for about half an hour with Mr. Roosevelt. The nature of their conversation was not disclosed.

Mr. Morgan visited the Capitol for a short time and saw several Senators, including Messrs. Aldrich, Hanna, and Gorman. It was asserted that the visit of Mr. Morgan had no significance concerning pending business in the Senate.

Mr. Morgan and his party to-night took dinner at the Arlington Hotel, Senator Hanna and Miss Phelps, the latter's niece, being Mr. Morgan's guests.

Mr. Morgan will remain in Washington until to-morrow at least and possibly until Saturday.

SENATOR HANNA'S LITTLE JOKE.

Gives Reasons for Not Being Photographed with the White House as a Background.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—When Senator Hanna came from the President's office to-day he was met by a photographer who requested him to pose for a picture with the White House as a background.

"None of that for me," said Mr. Hanna, as he prepared to enter his carriage. "The last time the Gridiron Club boys got hold of me they pretended to X-ray my head, and presented a photograph of Senator Hanna with the White House as the central figure of his aspirations. Oh, no. I don't want to give anybody any fresh opportunity to suppose that I am in love with the White House as an adornment of my picture. If you'll just go out to Pennsylvania Avenue I will make no objection to the photograph."

ATTACK ON FUNSTON RENEWED.

Herbert Welsh Says the Technical Disposal of Charges Does Not Clear the General's Honor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Herbert Welsh of Philadelphia to-day commented on the letters received by him from the Adjutant General's office relative to Mr. Welsh's recent suggestion that Gen. Funston and others be tried by court-martial on the charge of ordering the killing of prisoners at the battle of Calooean.

"It seems to be fair to conclude from the remarks of the Judge Advocate General, quoted by Assistant Adjt. Gen. Hall," said Mr. Welsh, "that the refusal to act as suggested rests purely upon technical grounds, since it is claimed that there is no authority of law for the appointment of a court-martial for the trial of either of the persons above named for an offense alleged to have been committed during the period of their service in the volunteer forces. This may dispose of the technical side of the matter, but it leaves the question of honor, the moral side, still open.

"Gen. Funston's instincts of honor as an officer and a gentleman should oblige him promptly to demand a searching inquiry into the allegations against him, so that they may either be disproved and his name freed, so far as this score is concerned, from the most injurious suspicions; or, if the charges are proved to be true, he may at the least be removed from his present exalted and responsible position. Or, if Gen. Funston's instincts do not lead him to take this step with promptitude and from the fact that he had allowed so long a time to elapse without taking it, one might naturally infer that they were not sufficiently strong for that purpose—then the honor of the army and of the people of the United States will demand that this step be taken."

MUSICAL ART SOCIETY

The Second Concert of Its Tenth Season in Carnegie Hall.

Choral Music, With and Without Accompaniment—Brahms's "Schicksalslied" Given.

The sustained interest that a firmly established constituency has shown in the work of the Musical Art Society was again in evidence last evening at the society's second concert in Carnegie Hall, when it completed its tenth season. It is a remarkable record that these ten years have made and one to reflect credit alike on the organization that has, on the whole, so persistently maintained its standards, and on its audiences, who have supported it in the high ideals it has set before itself, and have become more and more numerous as the years have gone on.

The form of choral art it cultivates cannot be expected in the nature of things to make an appeal to a widely popular taste; it has been chiefly that of the old, unaccompanied ecclesiastical music in the strict style of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, together with the church music of Bach and the finer sorts of unaccompanied part songs by modern composers. But the Musical Art Society has shown that there is a highly developed taste in this town for music of this class—a taste that its own work has, of course, done much to mold and cultivate during the last decade. Its audiences have been among the finest that are gathered together in New York in the name of music, and among the most exacting; and their constancy has been such as is not based upon fashion or a passing fancy.

Mr. Damrosch departed further from the established custom of the society in his choice of last night's programme than he has in a long time. It included Leonardo Leo's Miserere for double chorus, an arrangement of a sixteenth century German easter hymn, Cherubini's Credo for double chorus, a cappella; Brahms's Schicksalslied for chorus and orchestra, Cornelius's eight part chorus, "Liebe, dir ergebe ich mich"; three-part songs by Franz, and Berlioz's ballade for three choruses, with orchestra, "Sara la Baigneuse." Here was nothing of the early ecclesiastical style that has occupied so large a share of the society's attention. Leo's Miserere and the Credo of Cherubini came nearest to it; but both show in a different way modern tendencies.

Leo had already diverged far from the ancient manner and spirit, through his abandonment in large measure of the Church modes and in his expression of the more human and emotional quality that marks off the modern from the ancient ideal of church music. Cherubini's Credo is an essay in the old vocal style of the church composers, and is a marvel of contrapuntal learning placed at the service of a really beautiful gift of musical expression; but with all his severity Cherubini could not belie his century and his place in musical history, and the work is full of traits that show the modern feeling. The piece is far and away more vital to present day ears than such of his works as the respectable but inconsequential overture that stood recently upon an orchestral programme performed here. Mr. Damrosch seemed to regard it very considerably in the final section.

It was a real service to bring to a hearing Brahm's beautiful "Schicksalslied," for chorus and orchestra, and the society needed no apology for departing so far from the recognized lines of its activity as to include within its programme a work of such grave loveliness and dignity, such a lofty spirit. So, too, it may be said that there was justification for the performance of a piece of such singular and rococo charm as Berlioz's "Sara la Baigneuse." But as is usual with Berlioz, its interest depends not so much on the specifically musical quality of its inspiration as upon the ingenuity and adroitness of its workmanship to voice the languorous, exotic spirit of Hugo's poem. The modern concert society will not willingly see any tendency to move away from the field that it has made strictly its own, that of the cappella choruses of the ancients and the moderns, to busy itself with a kind of music that lies within the powers of choirs of less distinction.

The lesser songs were not so interesting as has usually been the case with such numbers on the Musical Art Society's programmes. The German Easter Hymn, as arranged by Pfitzdemann, is a rugged and virile piece with an interlude of tender expressiveness, but the three songs of Franz were but gracious trifles, one of them, "Die Trauernde," being a harmonized version of an air that he has also published as a solo song; and the eight-part chorus of Cornelius, which the society has made known in former years, is not one of his strongest or most characteristic works.

The chorus has sung better than it did last evening. Its best it gave in the Miserere of Leo's, and in the Credo of Cherubini's, both of which it sang with great force and delicacy and with an excellence of tonal balance and quality that were not noticeable in some of its other performances. There were some serious deficiencies in the orchestral accompaniments, and some strange things happened in the organ part that Mr. Dethier played for the Cherubini Credo.

KLAW & ERLANGER'S RUSE.

Steal a March on the Building Department and Put Up New Theatre Front at Night.

Klaw & Erlanger, who have been at loggerheads with the Building Department regarding the building line of their new theatre, the New Amsterdam, in West Forty-second Street, last night stole a march on the department and put up an entire marble front to the theatre. They would have put up the front yesterday, but were hindered by the presence of a lot of policemen and some inspectors.

Last night people coming out of the Victoria and Belasco Theatres saw the workmen swiftly putting in place the brick supports and marble facings by an incandescent light. Sometimes the carbons would sputter in an exasperating manner and then there would be some muttered imprecations on the part of the hurried workmen. But they continued the game by the light of the moon, for they knew that the Mayor might refuse to sign the special permit from the Board of Aldermen to let Klaw & Erlanger's line remain and then the Building Department would swoop down.

The trouble began when it was known that Klaw & Erlanger wanted to get into the new theatre by May 1. A man who is said to have offered to sell the theatrical firm some land at a stiff price discovered that the front of the new building at Forty-second Street crossed the building line. Then the Building Department was heard from and work ordered stopped. The theatrical firm, however, got an Alderman to have the ordinance regarding the building line set aside in this case. The matter passed the board and is now awaiting the Mayor's signature.

Klaw & Erlanger determined to go ahead with the front. The Building Department had an inkling of this and sent some policemen to the spot yesterday, but forgot that work could be done at night.

NEW LONDON THEATRE OPENED.

Sir Charles Wyndham Plays in "Rosemary" for Charity.

LONDON, March 12.—Sir Charles Wyndham to-night opened his new house called "The New Theatre" with a reproduction of "Rosemary." The entire receipts, amounting to $7,500, were devoted to charity.

The brilliant audience included Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, Lady Sarah Wilson, Princess Hatzfeldt, and many other persons of title.

The scheme of decoration of the theatre is Louis Seize, white with delicate blue medallions and Gobelin hangings. Sir Charles Wyndham and Mary Moore took their original parts, and the revival had an enthusiastic reception.

New York A. C. Billiards.

Two of the semi-final games in the straight rail handicap billiard tournament of the New York Athletic Club were to have been played last night, but there was only one contest. In the Class C division C. P. Ayres forfeited to W. S. Wilcox, and in Class B George Skinner, playing 120, defeated T. J. McCahill, Jr., (100,) by a score of 120 to 77. The winner's average was 2 12-54.

TORONTO OFFICIAL SCANDAL.

Premier Ross Suggests a Judicial Investigation at a Night Session of the Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ontario, March 12.—The Chamber was densely crowded when the Ontario Legislature met this evening, and there was intense excitement owing to the bribery charges made last night by Mr. Gamey of Manitoulin against Provincial Secretary Stratton and other members of the Government.

Premier Ross opened the proceedings with a motion that the House adjourn for three weeks, the Government to appoint a royal commission of Superior Court Judges to investigate Gamey's charges, the Government to provide counsel for both sides and pay all expenses, and this commission to report its findings when the House met again.

Premier Ross emphasized the necessity for getting a tribunal above suspicion of partiality and prejudice.

Mr. Whitney, the opposition leader, savagely attacked the proposal. It was permitting the accused to appoint the court which was to try them, he declared. There were Judges whose relations with the Government were too free because they had relatives on the provincial pay roll, he continued. The Legislature was still in session late to-night.

BUILDER'S QUEER ADVENTURE.

Thought Policemen Were Burglars, Fired at Them, and They Chased Him, Believing Him a Robber.

Being mistaken for the burglars they were looking for, and made targets of by a house owner with a revolver, was an experience which befell two policemen of the Parkville Station, Brooklyn, late on Wednesday night.

Several nights ago some chandeliers were stolen from several houses just erected by James Dow, a builder, on Twelfth Avenue, Borough Park. Dow reported the robbery to the police of the Parkville Station, and Patrolmen Doherty and Anderson were detailed to hunt for the thieves.

Dow, armed with a revolver, was watching his new houses late on Wednesday night when he saw two men trying the doors and windows of one of them. At the same time the two men saw Dow lurking in the shadows and they made a sudden move toward him.

The builder, believing the men to be burglars, and thinking they were about to attack him, fired three shots in their direction. The supposed burglars were Policemen Doherty and Anderson. When Dow fired they in turn became convinced that he was one of the robbers they were on the watch for, and, drawing their own revolvers, they rushed at him.

With the policemen in hot pursuit Dow ran down the street and into the house of a friend, from where he called up the Parkville Station on the telephone and reported that two burglars were in the neighborhood.

Capt. Martin Short hurried around with several of his men, only to find Dow busy explaining to the two policemen that he had mistaken them for burglars, and the policemen equally busy explaining to Dow that they had had the same idea about him.

SLIGHT FIRE IN SKYSCRAPER.

Just as tenants of the big Broadway Chambers skyscraper, whose name describes its location, were preparing to go home yesterday fire was discovered in the cellar, and many expedited their movements in consequence. It was a little blaze in a room where there was nothing but a quantity of waste paper, and so confident were the attaches of the structure that no word was sent through the building until after the engines arrived.

Many, especially on the upper floors, became nervous at the clanging of the firebells so far below, and when they saw the firemen enter their own building they hurried to the stairways and elevators. One minute heads were sticking out of every window, and the next their owners were in the halls, which quickly became crowded, but the smoke was hardly perceptible above the level of the street, and those who had tasks still to do quickly returned to them. The firemen worked for forty-five minutes to make sure that not a spark remained, and flooring torn up here and, there by their axes represented the sum and substance of the trifling damage.

REV. DR. C. W. SHIELDS RESIGNS.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 12.—At the March meeting of the Board of Trustees of the university held here this afternoon the Rev. Dr. Charles Woodruff Shields, Professor of the Harmony of Science and Revealed Religion in the university, tendered his resignation, to take effect next June. He is the fourth of the older members of the Faculty who have resigned in the past year. He was appointed Professor Emeritus.

Dr. Shields is well known from his connection with the signing of a petition to grant a liquor license to the Princeton Inn several years ago. The matter was taken up by a temperance paper and Dr. Shields was forced to resign from the Presbyterian Church. He has since become a member of the Episcopal Church here.

CO-OPERATIVE COMPANIES DINE.

The third annual dinner of the so-called "Big Five Co-operative Companies"—the United National Bank, the Consumers' Brewing Company of New York City, Excelsior Brewing Company, United Wine and Trading Company, Hudson County Consumers' Brewing Company, Consumers' Brewing Company of Brooklyn, Kick Baking Company, Federal Brewing Company, and American Exchange Cigar Company—took place last night at Faas's West End Casino. Representatives of the Brockville, Westport and Sault Ste. Marie Railroad Company were also present.

All these corporations are controlled by men united not only by business interests, but also by ties of friendship, and work in harmony. They represent a capital of $11,000,000. Charles Faas presided at the banquet, at which was preceded by a vaudeville performance. Speeches were delivered by Henry W. Gennerich, President of the United National Bank; John Reisenweber, President of the Excelsior Brewing Company; F. W. Saltzsieder of the Consumers' Brewing Company of Brooklyn; Mr. Von Herbern of the Hudson County Consumers' Brewing Company, John Gerken, Counselor Holm, Mr. Von Minden, and others.

PAPER JOBBERS DINE.

The Paper Association of New York, composed of the representatives of houses in the paper jobbing trade, held its annual dinner at the Arkwright Club, 320 Broadway, last night, with about fifty members present. The dinner was informal. Ex-Justice Joseph F. Daly, the speaker of the evening, spoke in reminiscent vein of his experiences on the bench and at the bar, and said in connection with his remarks on the jury system that if business men realized what their avoidance of jury duty cost the community they would be less anxious to get their names on the exempted list. He said that in the one particular of the Judge's charge he thought the American jury system could be improved by following English custom, where the presiding Judge, in charging, sums up the case as it appears to him, and does not attempt, as here, to make his charge a colorless thing.

At the business meeting of the association officers were elected as follows: President—W. D. May of New York; First Vice President—J. E. Linde of Hoboken; Second Vice President—Maurice O'Meara of New York; Treasurer—Thomas Barrett of New York; Secretary—Hazard Lasher of Brooklyn; Assistant Secretary—W. C. Ridgeway of Jersey City.

POSTAL COMPANY'S EXTENSION.

OMAHA, March 12.—The Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Postal Telegraph Company have come to an agreement by which the Postal Company will build a telegraph line on the Union Pacific right of way from Omaha to the Pacific Coast.

The poles and wires have been stored here for some time, and the work of construction will begin at once. The line will carry six wires, and the total cost of construction will be $1,500,000. The object of the new line is to connect the Postal Company's system more directly with the Pacific cable, now being constructed by the Mackay interests.

SWEEPING INQUEST IN BURDICK CASE

Every Person Mentioned in the Mystery to be Subpoenaed.

Will of the Murdered Man Cuts Off His Wife—To Contest His Selection of Guardians.

BUFFALO, March 12.—Thomas Murphy, Judge of the Police Court, announced this afternoon that he will hold the inquest into the death of Edwin L. Burdick next Tuesday.

"I propose to make it the most complete investigation ever conducted into any death in this county," said Judge Murphy. "I have subpoenaed everybody whose name has been mentioned in connection with this case. There are too many persons lingering under suspicion of causing Burdick's death. Only one person could have killed him. If I can find who that is, I propose to do so. At any rate, I expect to eliminate the names of innocent persons.

"I have set the date for next Tuesday in order to allow the police and District Attorney four more days in which to investigate the case. That ought to be long enough to bring out the truth. Anyway, it is as long as innocent persons ought to be under suspicion when their names have been in everybody's mouth since the murder was first reported."

Another move having an important bearing on the case was decided upon to-day after District Attorney Coatsworth had conferred with Chief of Detectives Cussick. The authorities have determined to obtain the telegrams that passed between Mrs. Burdick and Mrs. Hull before the murder of Burdick. The Grand Jury is now in session, and the District Attorney may conduct "John Doe" proceedings to require the Western Union to produce the telegrams. They were on the Monday and Tuesday before the Thursday of the murder, when Mrs. Burdick, who saw Arthur R. Pennell near New York, telegraphed to Mrs. Hull, who replied.

The authorities questioned both Mrs. Burdick and Mrs. Hull regarding the contents of these telegrams. Both of them gave the same version. They said the messages were an inquiry and a reply respecting the health of Edwin. The Western Union refused to produce the messages, and for that reason to-day's proceedings were decided upon. The telegrams may not be material to the case, but the authorities want to see them.

The authorities also may try to learn from both telegraph companies what telegrams, if any, passed between certain others for three weeks before Burdick's death.

A list of persons to be subpoenaed to the inquest was made up to-day. Many of the subpoenas were served to-night. Among those who will be called are Mrs. Burdick, Mrs. Hull, the servants, Maggie Murray and Katie Koenig; Dr. Marcy, Mrs. Paine, and a dozen others. The police believe the inquest will result in important developments.

Edwin L. Burdick's will, which is to be offered for probate to-morrow morning, cuts off Mrs. Burdick and bequeathes the estate, share and share alike, to the three children. G. H. Dunston, A. B. Kellogg, and George C. Miller are named as executors. A clause in the will naming the three executors as guardians for the children will likely be contested on the ground that the appointment is void because Mrs. Burdick is still alive.

The assertion is made that the law nullifies the appointment by will of a guardian where there is a surviving parent, unless both parents joined in the appointment. It will be asserted that Mrs. Burdick is, under the law, the person to be guardian. If the Surrogate so holds, it will be expected she can be to pay Burdick's debts and turn the remainder of the property over to Mrs. Burdick, as guardian for the children.

Burdick's estate is worth about $80,000, consisting of $35,000 in property, real and personal, and $26,000 in life insurance. Since she is cut off in the will, Mrs. Burdick will get only one-third of the real estate and none of the personal property.

FUNERAL OF THE PENNELLS.

Bar Association Committee to Attend—Letter Written by the Wife Tells of Faith in Her Husband.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 12.—The bodies of Arthur R. Pennell and his wife, the victims of Tuesday night's fatality at Gehre's quarry, were taken from the Niagara Street undertaking rooms to their former home in Cleveland Avenue this evening. After brief funeral services to-morrow they will be taken to Mr. Pennell's former home near Brunswick, Me., for interment.

The Rev. Dr. Frank S. Fitch of the First Congregational Church will read brief services at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Only close friends and relatives of the family and a committee representing the Bar Association of Erie County will be permitted to attend the funeral. The committee includes County Judge Edward K. Emery, Surrogate Louis W. Marcuse, ex-District Attorney Penney, and other well-known lawyers.

Aside from his $5,000 house, Mr. Pennell had no personal property in this city. Most of his estate consists of personal property, including his $210,000 of life insurance. The policies were made payable to his estate, and therefore are subject to the directions of the will.

If the will does not direct the disposal of the insurance, there being no children, one-half would go to Mrs. Pennell, the other half to be divided between Mr. Pennell's mother and his brother, J. Fred Pennell. But, Mrs. Pennell having died, the one-half that vested in her at her husband's death would ascend to her father. Mrs. Pennell recently came into a legacy of $149,000 by the death of a relative in New England. If she made no will this money also will go to her father.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 12.—In a letter to her sister, Miss Nellie Lamb of this city, written about a week ago, Mrs. Arthur R. Pennell of Buffalo referred to her husband's troubles as follows:

I feel sometimes as if I could not stand up under the strain, and yet for Arthur's sake I must. It is harder for him than for me, even, he is so sensitive. I can't bear to think of it. I think that all this trouble should come to us through our efforts to aid others.

The letter was in reply to a composite letter from several members of the Lamb family commending her for her bravery, and assuring her of their unwavering belief in Mr. Pennell's innocence of any connection with the death of Edwin L. Burdick.

AID IN PAYING HAVANA LOAN.

HAVANA, March 12.—The City of Havana has petitioned Congress to appropriate $200,000 annually in accordance with the intention of the Military Government to assist in paying off the Havana City loan of $28,000,000, which was awarded to Farson, Leach & Co. of New York.

The loan was contracted to pay for the construction of sewers ordered by the Military Government and for the refunding of other outstanding bonds. No opposition to the appropriation is expected.

Mr. Rockefeller's Offer to Acadia.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 12.—The Governor of Acadia College, at Wolfville, this province, has received an offer from John D. Rockefeller of New York to give to Acadia one dollar for each dollar raised by the college, up to $100,000, before Jan. 1, 1908.

TENEMENT HOUSE REFORM

Plymouth Church Rally to Uphold Commissioner De Forest.

Dr. Lyman Abbott Says a Thousand Homes in Ithaca Are Paying the Penalty of Carelessness—E. M. Shepard's Letter.

At the conclusion of a well-attended meeting held to consider the proposed amendments to the tenement house law at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, last night, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that no legislation affecting tenement houses should be approved by the Mayor or the Governor or the Legislature that is not favored by the Tenement House Commission.

This action was taken by those present to be a mark of approval of the work of Tenement House Commissioner De Forest, who was one of the speakers at the meeting. In the absence of the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the Rev. Willard P. Harman, assistant pastor, presided. He began by reading a letter from Edward M. Shepard, who said in part:

"I cannot do more than declare my very strong sympathy with the movement for the general maintenance of the tenement house law. Whatever criticisms may be made here and there, I regard the administration of Mr. De Forest, and the inauguration of the new law, as having been a distinct step forward in the interest of civilization and rational mercy, and, I may add, rational justice. It would be a sorrow and calamity, if, in Brooklyn or in any part of Greater New York, the beneficent provisions of the present law were to be repealed, or the law to be amended so as to permit a return to the conditions of housing of the poor and less fortunate citizens of Greater New York and their families, which used to be a shame to us all."

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott spoke of the fact that the cause of liberty in Hungary and Italy as well as in this country had always been championed from the Plymouth pulpit, and declared that the cause of the tenement house dwellers was no less dear to the people of Plymouth.

"God gives food, water, air, and sunlight to all of His children," he continued, "and if they are ever deprived of it, it is because of the selfish fault of their fellowmen. Two of them, air and sunlight, are absolutely free. They are lost either through ignorance, carelessness, or greed. For ignorance that does not know the need of air and sunlight the remedy is instruction. When there is carelessness there is the need of vigilance.

"The City of Ithaca does not have bad water through ignorance, but carelessness, and they are paying the penalty in a thousand homes. But the worst enemy is greed, the greed that cares more for things than for men, that places the profit on one side of the ledger and vital statistics on the other and tries to strike a balance.

"The whole question is whether men shall be housed so they shall have air to breathe and sunlight for health. They say that Tenement House Uniform will stop building. So will hygenic reform stop building in Ithaca—the building of coffins; and yet it would not be so bad to continue the building of coffins for the dead as the building of coffins for the living.

"They say it will stop the growth of Brooklyn. Do we want all kinds of growth? Do we want to unite all of the slums of Manhattan to Brooklyn? They say conditions are different in Brooklyn. Is that so? Do conditions that produce tuberculosis in Manhattan not produce them in Brooklyn? There is no law in economics more fixed than that wages will never fall below the living point.

"This is an answer to the cry for cheap rents. What we want is not cheap labor, but intelligent, well-fed, well-housed labor. Without a home there cannot be a state, without a house there cannot be a home. The tenement house law is only a poor attempt to make a little step in the right direction. I thank God for the Tenement House Commissioner. He is doing all that the community will let him do."

Richard Watson Gilder, the next speaker, said that the tenement house amendments introduced at Albany had been sent there by builders, who were "shining examples of rapacity and audacity of greed."

"I say," he added, "let the hand be stayed that would be raised up against the righteous provisions of the tenement house law."

Commissioner De Forest then spoke, saying that the last amendatory bill, which had been introduced with the approval of the Governor and municipal authorities and which supersedes the previous amendatory bills, would please all reasonable people. It was a victory for common sense and humanity and would be only unsatisfactory to unscrupulous builders and politicians who find profit in discord, and on the other hand, the ultra-idealists, who are seeking to realize an impossible perfection.

President William H. Baldwin, Jr., of the Long Island Railroad also spoke.

HOUSE ROBBERY IN HARLEM.

Apartments Entered by Two Men Who Attracted Attention Because They Had a Fine Carriage.

A daring robbery was committed yesterday afternoon in the Belmont, an apartment house at 24 West One Hundred and Thirty-second Street. The apartments in the fourth story, occupied by H. G. Defoe, were entered during a temporary absence of the family, and ransacked completely. The robbers obtained plunder valued at $300.

Mr. Defoe is a letter carrier attached to "L" Station at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue, and is also a member of the Letter Carriers' Band. Shortly after dinner he and his wife went out for a walk, taking their six-weeks-old baby.

At 2 o'clock Defoe returned and changed his clothes and immediately went out again. Within half an hour a carriage, drawn by two white horses, stopped in front of the house and two men left it and went up stairs. The carriage was quite swell-looking, and several of the people in other flats were curious about it, thinking that a wedding was in progress and that some one in the flats would go away in it.

About an hour later the two men emerged, one carrying a valise, and the carriage went away hurriedly.

When Mrs. Defoe returned, at 5 o'clock, she found that bureau drawers had been opened and their contents thrown over the floor, that the cupboards were in disorder, and that a state of general confusion prevailed. The thieves took two diamond pins, a cornet valued at $60, two silk waists, a silk skirt, a Winter jacket, the parlor clock, and all of the silver.

FRENCH MONKS' APPEAL LIKELY TO BE IN VAIN

Chamber Will Probably Decline to Authorize Them to Teach.

Debate on the Question Began—Premier Proposes That the Requests of the Orders Be Refused.

PARIS, March 12.—The Chamber of Deputies was the centre of great interest and animation to-day at the opening of the debate on the religious orders. A large crowd filled the galleries, and the floor of the Chamber was also crowded. The Ministerial bench was occupied by Premier Combes and most of his associates in the Ministry.

Previous discussions of the subject this session have involved incidental phases, such as the use of the Breton dialect in schools, but to-day's debate involved the main issue—the question of the discontinuance of teaching by the religious orders. The matter came up on a proposition, submitted by the Premier, refusing the requests for authorization to teach made by fifty-four male religious congregations. The expectation is that the debate will continue six to ten days. Owing to the strength shown by the Ministry on the recent test votes, the adoption of the Premier's proposition is considered practically certain.

The Abbé Gayraud (Catholic Republican) and M. Lerolle (Conservative) spoke to-day against the proposition. The Abbé asked the Chamber to recommit to the special committee the report that the Premier had submitted, on the ground that the report did not propose any means of assuring an existence to the members of the religious congregations, whom it was unjust thus to throw on the streets, many among them being seventy years of age. The Chamber, however, refused to listen to the appeal, and Abbe Gayraud finally withdrew his motion.

M. Lerolle's speech was an elaborate history of the rôle the religious orders have played in French history, to the glory of which, contended M. Lerolle, they had greatly contributed. The republic was, he declared, trying to deprive the monks of the means of living and to force them to starvation or expatriation. The Republicans were to-day following the example of the First Republic. They had no other ambition than that of satisfying party vengeance. If the majority refused to admit discussion on the question, and decided the series of questions which concerned separate congregations by a single vote refusing authorization to all congregations, liberty would be endangered. If this silence were enforced on the Conservative members in the Chamber it would force them to appeal to the entire country.

M. Lerolle's remarks referred to the procedure which the Republicans propose to adopt in dividing the congregations into three groups, and refusing to allow the authorization of each congregation to be discussed separately.

M. Barthou replied on the Republican side, attacking the religious orders as being the negation of human liberty and the abdication of individual personality. The congregations, he said, depended on their chiefs residing in Rome. The members had no country. By refusing to concede discussion on each individual case the Republicans would refuse to consent to a slow and uncertain manner of proceeding, which the congregations regarded as a forlorn hope, and which the democracy would consider to be culpable weakness.

The speakers were warmly applauded by their respective supporters, and the debate was adjourned until to-morrow.

MARSHALL O. ROBERTS TO WED.

Son of New York Merchant, Now a British Officer, to Marry Sir George Murray's Daughter.

LONDON, March 12.—The engagement is announced of Marshall O. Roberts, son of Mrs. Ralph Vivian, formerly Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts of New York, to Miss Irene Helen Murray, daughter of Sir George Herbert Murray.

Mr. Roberts is a Lieutenant in the Scots Guards, of which regiment his stepfather was formerly Colonel.

A good deal of surprise was caused in society circles in this city three years ago by the announcement that Marshall Owen Roberts had become a British subject. His father, the late Marshall O. Roberts, was one of New York's leading merchants a generation ago. He was a native of this city, and was an ardent supporter of the Union cause at the time of the civil war.

Lieut. Roberts is twenty-four years old. The greater part of his life has been spent in England, and he was educated at Cambridge. In 1901 his mother married Col. Ralph Vivian, a retired British officer.

Mrs. Vivian comes of a historic American family. She is the daughter of John Endicott of Salem, Mass., and a lineal descendant of John Endicott who came over on the Mayflower. She was the third wife of Marshall O. Roberts, who laid the foundations of his great fortune by a contract to supply the United States Navy with oil in 1837. Later he became interested in navigation, and built the Hendrik Hudson, one of the finest of the early Hudson River steamboats.

The Roberts mansion, at Fifth Avenue and Eighteenth Street, was a social centre when the present Mrs. Vivian was its mistress.

Sir George Murray was private secretary to Mr. Gladstone when the latter was Prime Minister.

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT OPENED

Lord Minto Says a Commission Will Be Named to Consider Grain Transportation.

OTTAWA, Ontario, March 12.—Parliament was opened this afternoon by Lord Minto, the Governor General.

In the speech from the throne which his Excellency delivered it was said that owing to the rapid increase of population in the Northwest Territories and the large areas brought under cultivation the question of transportation of grain to the markets of the world through Canadian channels is occupying much attention, and a commission will be appointed to report upon the whole subject.

Short reference was made to the treaty for the delimitation of the Alaska boundary. The speech called attention to the readjustment of the representation of the several provinces in accordance with the British North America act as a result of the last decennial census. Bills are promised for the creation of a Railway Commission, amendment of patent laws, militia act, Chinese immigration, reorganization of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and many others.

LAWLESSNESS IN MOROCCO.

Cattle Robberies by Armed Bands Lead to Tribal Feuds.

LONDON Times—New York Times Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—The Times's correspondent at Tangier says that local disturbances are increasing throughout Northern Morocco owing to the constant cattle robberies by armed bands, which the local Governments are incapable of crushing. The frequent loss of life tends to increase the importance of the raids, which quickly become tribal feuds, resulting in further bloodshed.

The correspondent says there is a general feeling of pessimism among the native officials at Tangier. Opinion is divided in regard to the propriety of the Sultan leaving Fez and taking command of his troops, which it seems probable he will do.

THE DUTCH ANTI-STRIKE BILL.

Application of the Measure Optional—Considerable Popular Excitement Over It.

London Times—New York Times Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—There is considerable popular excitement in Holland, says the Brussels correspondent of The Times, over the bill declaring strikes illegal, though, judged impartially, the measure contains nothing infringing on personal liberty.

The first clause of the bill imposes a maximum of six months' imprisonment and 100 florins' fine for a willful attempt to coerce workmen, by fear or otherwise, to strike.

The second clause relates to public servants, who are liable to six months' imprisonment and 300 florins' fine for willful neglect of or refusal to perform their allotted duties. The imprisonment is increased to four years if the acts emanate from a collective body of public servants, this being viewed as a conspiracy against the State.

The third clause imposes the same penalties in the case of the instigators of such a conspiracy.

The preamble states that the act of interference with personal liberty may be justifiable or may be illegal and arbitrary. Consequently the application of the measure is optional. The supporters of the bill maintain that it does not restrict the liberty to strike so long as such action is kept within proper limits.

The Times's correspondent thinks that but for the inflammation of party feeling in connection with the strikes in January none but Socialist agitators could quarrel with the principle of the bill.

BRITAIN AND THE MACEDONIANS.

London Times—New York Times Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—The Times's correspondent at Sofia says that Lord Lansdowne's reservations in accepting the Macedonian reform scheme have produced a considerable impression. It is inferred that Great Britain regards both the proposals and the guarantees for their execution as insufficient.

The correspondent adds that the prolonged indifference of Great Britain in regard to the Near East and the eclipse of her influence there are deplored by the more thoughtful politicians of all the Balkan States as detrimental to the independence of the young nationalities.

RUSSIAN PAPER GRATIFIED.

London Times—New York Times Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—The leading St. Petersburg paper, the Novoe Vremya, in an article quoted by The Times's correspondent in the Russian capital, warmly applauds the Czar's announcement. It says that, while "the Mir" is to be maintained, it will be rendered easier for the peasants to sever themselves from their communal system, mutual responsibility for taxation being abolished.

The Novoe Vremya adds that the changes foretold in the proclamation will constitute the reform of local administration and local self-government in the direction of greater unity. The most urgent problems of internal State policy find a place in the programme.

DR. MUELLER RETURNS.

Dr. Lorenz's Assistant Will Attend the Cases of Recent Operations and Operate Also.

Dr. Frederick Mueller, assistant to Dr. Adolf Lorenz, the distinguished Austrian orthopedist, arrived in this city yesterday on board the North German Lloyd steamship Barbarossa. He comes to attend the cases upon which Dr. Lorenz operated a few months ago, particularly the case of little Miss Armour, in Chicago. Dr. Mueller, however, intends to settle in Chicago. It is understood that he has been selected to fill the Chair of Orthopedy in the College of Medicine of the University of Chicago, although Dr. Mueller said last evening that he had not been informed that the position had been or would be tendered him.

"Would you accept such an offer if it were made you?" he was asked.

"It would be a great honor," he answered, "and I would be happy to accept it."

When Dr. Mueller walked down the gangplank at the Hoboken pier at 6 o'clock last evening he was welcomed by a Reception Committee of a dozen men representing the Order of B'nai B'rith and Beth Israel Hospital, where Dr. Mueller will make his medical headquarters during his brief stay in this city.

Dr. Isidor Singer, editor of the Jewish Encyclopedia, addressed Dr. Mueller cordially for the committee. Referring to Dr. Lorenz, Dr. Singer said that he left an indescribable souvenir in the hearts of hundreds of thousands of American men and women, not only because of his wonderful surgical skill, but also because of the charm of his personality.

Dr. Mueller said that Dr. Lorenz was enjoying excellent health when he left him in Vienna. He treasured his memory of America and the Americans. He had made no definite plans for another visit to this country, nor had he set any date for the return; it might be two years, it might be three years, Dr. Mueller said.

"We have heard of a single operation performed by Dr. Lorenz in America that was not successful," said Dr. Mueller. "I shall look over as many of them as will be possible, however. Of course I shall attend little Miss Armour particularly. My information is that the child is making good progress. It may be a year, however, before she recovers completely. It will be necessary for me to massage the limb and hip almost every day."

Dr. Mueller will remain in this city for four or five days, living in the Murray Hill Hotel. He will operate by the "bloodless sirgical" method on several poor crippled children, regardless of creed, in Beth Israel Hospital.

FORAKER SOUNDS AN ALARM.

Sees in Democratic Candidate for Mayor of Cincinnati a Possible Candidate for the Presidency.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, March 12.—United States Senator Foraker to-day gave out a statement on the political situation here, in the course of which he said:

"There is no reason, so far as the personnel of the candidates for Mayor is concerned, for preferring Mr. Ingalls, the Democratic candidate, to Mr. Fleischmann, the Republican candidate, and there is every reason why all Republicans should stand by their own candidate. The next election in Cincinnati is not to be a contest that concerns only the people of this city. It is impossible to disguise the fact that this is the beginning of the great campaign of next year, which is to determine the Presidency.

"Republicans who think of voting a fusion ticket on the theory that only municipal business affairs are at stake, should note, however, that all over the United States Democrats everywhere are preaching harmony and perfecting their organizations. Their nominations for the Spring elections throughout the country have been made with reference to the greater contest in the State and Nation that are immediately to follow."

Senator Foraker also asserts that if Mr. Ingalls is elected Mayor, he is in line for the Governorship of Ohio and the Presidency.

COURT FORBIDS A STRIKE

Federal Judge Enjoins Transfer Drivers in Kansas City.

Takes the Ground That They Are Federal Employes—Orders Them Not to Damage a Company's Business.

KANSAS CITY, March 12.—An injunction was granted to-night to the Kansas City Transfer Company against the Team Drivers' International Union No. 439, and the sympathizers of the strike by Judge John F. Philips of the United States District Court.

The action was brought on the ground that the complainants are Government cart men, being employed by the Government in transporting bonded goods. The papers filed with the court state that the company was unable to secure the names of all the members of the union, but such names when obtained will be added to the list contained in the order.

The order restrains the defendants from participating in the strike; from interfering with or intimidating the company's drivers; from picketing or patroling the sidewalks adjacent to the company's place of business, and from confederating or conspiring to ruin, destroy, or damage the business of the company.

A United States Deputy Marshal served the order upon the defendants immediately after it was granted. It is probable that other transfer companies will ask for restraining orders from the Federal court to-morrow.

TWO WOMEN DEFY STRIKERS.

Drive Vans in Kansas City to Help Their Husbands—Striking Drivers Show Courtesy.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 12.—Mrs. George D. Evans, whose husband is connected with the American Transfer Company, and who whipped her way through the strikers yesterday, drove one of her husband's heavy freight vans again to-day. Strikers who saw her raised their hats.

Mrs. H. S. Meyers also drove a freight van. Her husband was one of the non-union drivers employed by the Western Transfer Company. His wagon was stopped this morning at Twelfth and Mulberry Streets by strikers. They talked to him and persuaded him to leave the wagon in the street. As he climbed down his wife broke through the crowd and climbed to the driver's seat.

"Get up here," she said. He refused and she repeated her command, scorning the strikers who stood about. Policeman Clark came up and told the strikers to clear the street. They obeyed without protest. The woman said she would continue to drive and assist her husband on the wagon as long as it was necessary.

A big crowd of strikers and sympathizers followed one wagon driven by a non-union man, and when a few stones were thrown he returned his team to the barns. About fifty additional men went out during the day, making a total of 235, and, as few men were hired in their places, the business of the transfer companies was practically at a standstill.

THE SHIPYARD STRIKE.

New Men Put to Work at Shooters Island—Employers and Union Officials Talk.

The New York Metal Trades Association had a prolonged meeting yesterday afternoon at 203 Broadway, at which the shipbuilding strike was considered, but it was decided to make no formal statement after the meeting was over. It was learned that 350 men, consisting of carpenters and joiners, calkers, and painters, were put to work at the Townsend-Downey Shipbuilding Yards at Shooters Island in place of the strikers. Policemen were stationed at some of the yards to head off any trouble.

Wallace Downey of the Townsend-Downey Shipbuilding Company said that the idle strikers were giving no trouble so far. Some of the old men were anxious to come back.

"We are anxious to put our side of the controversy in its true light," he said. "We do not blame our union men for striking when they are so ordered by their delegates. They cannot help themselves, and many of them have done so reluctantly. But we do maintain the right to employ both union and non-union labor."

Henry C. Hunter, Secretary of the New York Metal Trades Association, said that the yards were getting more men every day. The strike would be lost, in fact was already lost by the strikers, many of whom realized that it was ill-advised, he said.

Francis J. McKay, business agent of the Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders, said he estimated that between 4,000 and 5,000 men were on strike in the various yards. Many offers, he said, were received from firms asking him to supply them with men at union rates. He thought it hardly fair, however, he said, to help other firms to take the business away from the firms the strikers regularly worked for, even though they were on strike.

Regarding the statement issued by Secretary Hunter of the Metal Trades Association that the strike was ordered after the Marine Trades Council received a letter from the association agreeing to an arbitration proposition, he said:

"Mr. Hunter has confused two propositions. A committee was first appointed by the different trades, representing fourteen trades, with full power to act. We went to Mr. Hunter's office for the sole purpose of trying to settle the Shooters Island trouble. Mr. Hunter said that nothing could be done and that ended the matter. It was later suggested that the employers should try to get together to appoint a committee of settlement. This was done, but we received a letter stating that the employers could not meet us until the strike was declared off. This we could not agree to."

HEAVY REWARD FOR MURDERER

Total of $19,400 for Slayer of Policeman Mendelssohn in Waterbury Strike Trouble.

WATERBURY, Conn., March 12.—After a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting Company to-day President A. M. Young announced that he was authorized to offer a reward of $5,000 for information leading to the conviction of the murderer of Policeman Mendelssohn. This, along with the $10,000 offered by the Connecticut Legislature, brings the total of rewards authorized up to $19,400.

A car on the Naugatuck line was derailed to-night by a stone placed on the track, and it was necessary to send here for the repair car before the trip to this city could be resumed. That was the only incident of the night.

John W. Chambers, the motorman of the car which was attacked by masked men Sunday night, is, it was learned to-day, the nephew of Samuel K. Chambers, President of the National Bank of West Grove, Penn. Young Chambers said that he was in New York when he heard of the strike and decided to come here. He expressed his intention of remaining in the city.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 12.—The Senate's resolution appropriating $10,000 for the apprehension of the murderer of Policeman Paul Mendelssohn of Waterbury, who was killed Sunday night in an attack on a trolley car, was adopted to-day by the House.

Trial for Scannell and Marks.

John J. Scannell, ex-Fire Commissioner, and William L. Marks, a representative of the Akron Rubber Company, will have to stand trial under the indictments filed against them on Nov. 22, 1901. Justice Scott in the Supreme Court yesterday overruled the demurrers made by their attorneys. The allegations are that contracts for supplies for the Fire Department were let to others than the lowest bidders without authority of law. Justice Scott said that he found no essential allegations of facts lacking in the indictments.

BOY CHASE ON ROOFS.

Two Detectives Outwitted Twice by Pigeon Trapper—Success in Third Attempt at Capture.

Detectives Rowland and Hore of the West Forty-seventh Street Station had a lively time yesterday in the capture of George Young, seventeen years of age, of 708 Eleventh Avenue on a charge of disorderly conduct. They chased him three times on the roofs of a row of houses on Fiftieth Street and then by strategy caught him.

The agent of the houses at 514 to 524 West Fiftieth Street had complained that the boy had annoyed the tenants by running over the roofs and conducting a pigeon trap on the roof at 516. It was said that he had three trained pigeons that enticed other pigeons into the trap.

The detectives saw the boy on a roof yesterday morning, and when they went there he ran along the coping and disappeared down a scuttle hole. In the afternoon they went again to look for him. He was sitting on the scuttle of 522. They went as far as the roof of 520 before he saw them. The boy ran over the roofs and jumped down to the roof of 524 and defied the detectives to follow him. The detectives ran to the street and searched the house at 524, but they could not locate the boy.

Two hours later the detectives made their third attempt. Rowland went up to the roof of 514 and Hore to the roof of 520. Young was on the roof of 516. When he saw Rowland he dropped a pigeon he had been feeding and ran along the coping to 520, where he was caught by Hore.

"You fellows are so easy that I got careless," remarked Young on the way to the police station.

HEARING ON CITY BILLS.

The Mayor's Sympathy for Retired Policeman O'Keefe, Who Lost the Sight of Both Eyes.

Public hearings were held in Mayor Low's office yesterday on city bills which have passed the Legislature. One bill provides for a Third Deputy Police Commissioner. No person appeared to favor or speak against the bill, and Mayor Low announced that it would be accepted by the city.

Another bill provides for a full pension to Patrick O'Keefe, a policeman who was retired from the force on Dec. 5, after losing the sight of both eyes. He appeared to plead his cause. Sergt. Kennel led him to the Mayor's desk, and, after the hearing, lifted his hand for him when Mr. Low expressed the desire to shake hands with him.

The policeman arrested a liquor dealer at 2,348 Second Avenue on Sept. 30, 1899. The prisoner, Michael Fiorella, yielded quietly at first, but in the hallway of the saloon he drew a pistol and shot the policeman in the temple, destroying the sight of both eyes. Fiorella was sent to Sing Sing Prison for ten years.

Mr. Low expressed much sympathy for the policeman and promised, if he found he has the legal right to do so, to approve the bill, that changes the half pay to the full amount received by a policeman of the first class.

Commissioner Greene, in a written report, said he thought it was a deserving case, but that, as a general principle, he opposed that class of legislation.

Ex-Fire Commissioner Bryant of Brooklyn appeared to support a bill that provides for the reopening of the case of a fireman, Weygate, who was dismissed from the Fire Department thirteen years ago. A similar bill was vetoed by Mr. Van Wyck when he was Mayor. Commissioner Sturgis, in a letter, objected to the bill on various grounds, and Mr. Low said he could not approve it. Weygate offered to give up all claim to back pay and told a story of political persecution, but he did not influence the Mayor.

The Mayor named Wednesday next for a hearing on the bill to reinstate O'Neill, the policeman who was dismissed for defying Devery, and who afterward spoke for the Fusion ticket in the city campaign. The bill was passed on Wednesday, and it was delivered in the City Hall in the first mail yesterday.

DENY THEY KILLED PHARES.

Mrs. Phares and Taylor Arraigned—Woman Blames Their Arrest Upon Gossipping Neighbors.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., March 12.—Mrs. Albert A. Phares, wife of Constable Phares, who died suddenly on Monday night, and Garfield Taylor were arraigned on a technical charge to-day and held. They both denied being in any way responsible for the death of Phares, as the authorities allege they are.

Mrs. Phares blames gossipping neighbors for her arrest, and says some of them have for a long time been very much interested in her movements. Taylor was in the house when Phares died within five minutes after becoming ill. Harry Burr, who was also in the house at the time, is said to have furnished the authorities with evidence which they claim will show that Phares was killed in order that Mrs. Phares might marry Taylor, who is a young farmer, said to be well-to-do.

The inquest will not be held until the chemist who is examining the stomach of Phares is ready to make his report. This will probably be next week.

HAWAIIAN OFFICIAL ACCUSED.

Commissioner of Agriculture Taylor, Now in This County, Sought for Embezzlement.

HONOLULU, March 12.—Wray Taylor, Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry for the Territory of Hawaii, is accused of embezzlement. A police agent left this city yesterday on the steamship Alameda with extradition papers and a warrant for Taylor's arrest.

Taylor sailed from here on Jan. 3 for San Francisco to consult with the California Board of Horticulture. He was heard from regularly up to the middle of February and was expected to return here Feb. 10. It is believed that Taylor went East from San Francisco and crossed the Atlantic. If that is the case, the police agent will endeavor to trace and follow him.

MAY SUCCEED McCULLAGH.

Charles S. Adler Said to Have Been Summoned to Albany.

It was stated on apparently excellent authority yesterday that ex-Assemblyman Charles S. Adler of the Eighth Assembly District had been summoned to Albany and that there was some probability that he would be offered the position of Superintendent of Elections for the metropolitan district, now held by John McCullagh. Mr. Adler was said last night to be out of the city.

Mr. McCullagh said he had heard nothing of the prospective selection of Mr. Adler, and professed confidence in his own reappointment.

Mr. Adler represented the Eighth District in the Assembly for several years. He was defeated for Congress last Fall by Henry M. Goldfogle.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

CHICAGO, March 12.—Fire in the Yorkshire Hotel, 1,837 Michigan Avenue, early to-day caused a loss estimated at $10,000.

HYDE PARK, Mass., March 12.—A loss of about $12,000 was caused by a fire in a three-story brick block on Hyde Park Avenue, used for business and tenement purposes, here to-day.

The Remarkable Completeness Of Our Showing of

Women's Dresses

YOU expect much from WANAMAKER'S in the matter of Dresses for women—and rightly. We have taught our public to look for lavish variety in both foreign and domestic garments.

This season we ourselves are astonished at the assemblage presented. Perhaps we have been carried even too far by our enthusiasm over the fine things we have found.

Manufacturers have outdone all their past achievements and WANAMAKER'S is still fully representative of them all. Certainly the array presented today is most superb. Here are—

Costumes, domestic and imported, $35 to $450.
Tailor-made Suits, domestic and imported, $12 to $150.
Walking Suits, $15 to $65.
Summer Costumes of organdie and point d'Esprit, $10 to $100.
Shirt-waist Dresses, of silk, $13.50 to $45.
Dresses, of pongee, $20 to $60.
Shirt-waist Suits, of washable stuffs, $5.50 to $35.
Dress Skirts, $5 to $57.
Walking Skirts, $3 to $25.

What desire can remain ungratified from such abundant selection? Second floor, Broadway.

Women's Jackets Of Covert Cloth

FIFTY women out of every hundred, that come to buy a Spring jacket nowadays, get covert cloth. The material has taken a sudden jump again into popular favor.

Part of the reason lies in the coats themselves. Never have they been so excellently tailored, never have they possessed so much style, in so many good variations.

Take our showing for example—the best, we think, you'll find in town. Note the smartness, the swing of the jacket at $7.50. Then follow it up through the $12.50, $15, $16.50 and $20 grades—at which popular prices we've exerted ourselves particularly—to the topmost coat at $35—an entirely new effect at every turn.

There are miracles wrought in strappings and stitchings—and the coats are built to keep their original stylish shape. Certain long-skirted coats are rapidly gaining in favor, particularly among tall women.

In fairness to yourself, you should see this showing first. Second floor, Broadway.

Sale of $5.50 Silk Waists, $3.50

TWO hundred and fifty women will be able to secure today new and stylish Silk Waists to wear with their Spring costumes, at a wonderfully low price for the excellence it buys—for waists worth fully $5.50.

They are of Louisine, Liberty satin, peau de cygne and taffeta, in a variety of dainty new colorings, such as pale and turquoise blue, sage green and royal blue, also white and black. They are plaited in various attractive styles, some with fagoting.

A really remarkable offering, just when a new waist is so desirable. Tenth street, Elevator Counter.

Girls' Spring Coats

MORE warm days are crowding in between the cold ones—days on which the heavy jacket becomes uncomfortable to wear. And in a good many cases, the little maidens are growing tired of the very looks of the Winter coat.

These pretty Spring Jackets will gladden their hearts and make them feel comfortable. And the variety and moderateness of prices will appeal strongly to their mothers. Prices run up to $21; sizes are 6 to 14 years:

At $5—Three-quarter length Reefers of navy blue cheviot and tan covert cloth; well tailored.
At $8.50—Loose Box Reefers, of best quality navy blue and red cheviot; nicely trimmed with braid.
At $10—Box Coats of tan covert cloths; triple capes and stole front.
At $13.50—Loose Box Coats of tan covert cloth; trimmed with velvet and straps of cloth.
Second floor, Ninth street.

Still Clinging to Your Winter Coat?

IT'S a good plan, on some raw, blustering March days. But there are others, on which a heavy overcoat isn't quite so welcome. You're bound to wear it, however, if you haven't your Spring overcoat handy by.

We're here to help you get that Spring overcoat—today, if you wish. Our stock is full—and you have an immense amount of leeway from which to choose. Whatever it is—light covert, black cheviot, smart surtout or cravenette raincoat, you can't go wrong in quality, style, fit and price—we weld a harmonious whole out of these four essential ingredients.

A rapid walk-around:

At $10—Excellent overcoats of all-wool black cheviot or medium color covert cloth.
At $15—Overcoats of dark Oxford and black cheviots; also medium color covert cloths; serge-lined, with satin sleeve-linings.
At $15 and $18—Stylish Overcoats of covert cloth; 52 inches long; stitched collars and sleeves. Particularly suitable for young men.
At $15—Two coats that we sell by the hundreds. One of dark Oxford cheviot, the other of black unfinished worsted; both are silk-lined and faced to edge. $20 would be a fair price.
At $20—Covert Coats; silk-lined; in short and medium lengths; stylish and serviceable.
At $22 and $25—Overcoats of unfinished worsteds; Oxford gray; silk-lined, beautifully tailored and equal to fine custom work.
At $22 to $35—Surtout Overcoats in fancy cheviots and covert cloth.
At $25 and $30—Cravenette Raincoats; the best tailored raincoats you ever saw. Made by the same people that tailor our finest overcoats; with perfect-fitting shoulders; vertical or regular pockets. In dark Oxford, brown, sage greens and light grays.
Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Fix the Boy Up

DON'T blame the boy for having scuffed up his Winter clothes—what's bad for the clothes is good for the boy; and new clothes are cheaper than doctors' bills.

The spic-span-new things for Spring are all ready. Good, stout, good-looking suits for genuine boys.

The "Wanamaker Special" Double-breasted Suits; double seat and knees; taped seams; all silk-sewed; sizes for 8 to 16 years; in blue serge and mixed cheviot; all selected patterns, at $5.

New Ginghams

Scotch and American

EVEN if women weren't confronted, in the immediate foreground, with a need for Summer shirt-waists and wash dresses, it would be a delight to look through this congress of Ginghams, assembled here in a sort of hands-across-the-sea gathering. For the best manufacturers of Scotland and America are represented in the exhibition, to the tune of about five hundred new patterns and colorings.

There are styles with the pattern worked out in Persian colored stripes; others have fancy lace stripes, still others are copied from the popular weaves in woolen fabrics, with dashes and splashes of white nub yarns mixed through the material.

And the price-range corresponds in broadness to the variety of patterns.

Hints of both:

Fancy Scotch Ginghams

At 35c yard—Mercerized Corded Striped Ginghams.
At 35c yard—Lace Striped Ginghams, woven with mercerized yarns.
At 35c yard—Fancy Corded Striped Ginghams.
At 35c yard—Lace and Persian Corded Striped Ginghams.
At 37½c yard—Fancy Striped Ginghams, designs in white and Persian colored lace stripes, with small colored cubes between the stripes.
At 40c yard—Fancy Striped Ginghams; designs in lace stripes of white and Persian colored yarns, and small checks in white mercerized yarns covering the surface of the cloth.
At 65c yard—Novelty Velvet Polka-dot Ginghams; the little velvet polka-dots are attached to the cloth after being woven and placed there to stay as long as the cloth lasts; designs in black or colors.
At 75c yard—Fancy Bourretted Ginghams, woven similar to a wool poplin with a bourette mixture of white mercerized cotton.
At 75c yard—Fancy Nub Figured Ginghams in combinations of white and colors.
At 85c yard—Fancy Nub Figured Ginghams in combinations of white and colors.

Fancy American Ginghams

At 25c yard—Fancy Striped and Checked Ginghams in possibly two hundred different varieties of corded, Persian figured and jacquard figured stripes. A quality that approaches that of the Scotch-made goods retailing at 37½ and 40c a yard.
At 25c yard—Fancy Corded Striped Tissue Ginghams.
At 37½c yard—Fancy Ribbon-drawn Striped Tissue Ginghams.
At 37½c yard—Mercerized Dentelle Striped Ginghams, in attractive colored stripes on white grounds.
At 37½c yard—Fancy Figured Mercerized Striped Ginghams of white on colored grounds.
At 50c yard—Fancy Silk-and-cotton Ginghams, in a large variety of corded and figured stripes.
At 50c yard—Silk-and-cotton Ginghams, designs in polka-dots of white upon colored grounds.
At 55c yard—Fancy Silk-and-cotton Ginghams, in a variety of corded and figured striped designs.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE

Anti-Beef Trust Bill Is Passed by the Senate.

Measure to Prohibit Spring Duck Shooting Defeated—Attack on the Central Terminal Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—Several important bills came up for consideration in the Senate to-day.

Senator Elsberg's bill, giving to the Retail Butchers' Association of Greater New York the right to erect an abattoir on Thirty-ninth Street and Eleventh Avenue, was passed. The purpose of the association is to compete with the Beef Trust. It some time ago raised $750,000 for this purpose. For the site on Thirty-ninth Street and Eleventh Avenue $250,000 was paid. The remaining $500,000 is to be invested in the abattoir.

The city authorities of New York refused to grant the permit on the ground that an effort was being made to drive out of Manhattan all slaughter houses. The retail butchers say that when their abattoir is in operation they will be able to reduce the price of beef to the consumers of New York city 1 cent a pound, which would mean a saving of more than $7,000,000 a year.

Senators Foley and Frawley were the only members who voted against the bill.

The bill of Senator Elon R. Brown, prohibiting the shooting of wild birds in the Spring, was defeated by a vote of 23 to 23. Mr. Brown pointed out the necessity of protecting web-footed fowl. They were fast becoming exterminated, he said. Spring was the breeding season for these birds. Senator Malby also talked in favor of the bill.

Senator Bailey of Long Island opposed the measure, arguing that it would deprive a large number of worthy citizens of his district of an occupation in Springtime when they acted as guides to sportsmen who came down to the bays of the island for duck and other wild fowl. He offered an amendment to exempt Long Island from the provisions of the measure. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 21 to 24.

The advocates of the bill, however, could not muster strength sufficient to pass the bill. When the tie was announced, Senator Brown moved to reconsider the vote. His motion was laid on the table.

"I ask," spoke up Senator Bailey, "that this bill shall not be called up when I am absent."

Since this bill has been introduced, the Senator from the First has not been absent from the Senate a minute," rejoined Mr. Brown, amid laughter.

Senator Grady made an effort to have the Committee on Railroads discharged from the consideration of the New York Central terminal bills, and have the measures referred to the Committee on Cities. He said that, inasmuch as the city was to pay part of the cost of the improvement, the Cities Committee was the proper one to consider the bills. The motion to discharge was defeated by a vote of 26 to 22.

Senator Fassett's bill to abolish the office of Coroner in New York City and substitute medical examiners was advanced to third reading without objection. The fight on the bill will take place when it is called up on third reading.

Senator Dowling's resolution in favor of a Constitutional amendment which would permit of the election of United States Senators by popular vote was favorably reported by the Committee on Judiciary. The Senate laid the resolution on the table. This is probably the last that will be heard of it.

The McCarren bill providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate and secure water sheds for a supply of pure water for Brooklyn was advanced to third reading after it had been amended so that the city could not go into Suffolk County for its supply.

In the Assembly Mr. Everett tried to introduce a resolution calling upon the Governor to submit copies of all communications from the Federal Government announcing the perfection of a bullet for riot use only, but Mr. Rogers objected and the resolution was rejected.

HEARING ON FIREMEN'S BILL.

Taxpayers Ask That the Two-Platoon System Be Inaugurated in New York City.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—The Assembly Cities Committee to-day considered the Webb bill to inaugurate the two-platoon system in the New York Fire Department.

Ex-Foreman James Clifford, who was dismissed from the department by Commissioner Scannell for his activity in organizing the firemen to better their condition, made a long argument in favor of the bill. He said that the system of working firemen for twenty-one hours at a stretch was nothing short of barbarous. Every year men who under ordinary conditions of labor would have remained robust are broken down in health. Their breakdown was not due, he said, to the hardships they had to face in the line of active duty, but to those which they were compelled to endure because of the rigorous discipline.

Frederick W. Coles, a merchant of John Street, New York, presented a numerously signed petition from taxpayers praying that the relief asked by the firemen be granted to them. Mr. Coles denied the statement that the present force must be doubled to permit of the two-platoon system. He said that an increase of 15 per cent would be all that would be necessary to bring about the reform. He declared the department would be able to render much better service under the two-platoon system than under present conditions.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Whitman opposed the bill on behalf of Fire Commissioner Sturgis. Mr. Whitman said that it would be as absurd to divide the force of the Fire Department as it would be to divide an army brigade. Like an army, it was necessary that the whole available force of the department should be ready to answer the emergency arose.

He said that a proposition was now being pressed by the Fire Commissioner to allow the department an extra number of men and officers. With the additional force proposed the firemen would be given as much unbroken leisure as it was reasonable for them to expect. All that ought to be done by the city in this direction, he asserted, could be accomplished for one-sixth of the expense which would be entailed by the adoption of the two-platoon system.

INSURANCE BILL REPORTED.

Senator Bailey's Anti-Trust Measure Is Out of Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—The Senate Committee on Insurance to-day reported favorably a bill introduced by Senator Bailey aimed at the Fire Insurance Trust. It provides that whenever a person is able to get better rates from an outside company than he can get from a fire insurance company of the State he shall have the privilege of taking out a policy with the foreign company.

As the bill was reported by the committee two amendments were made to it. They are that the privilege of outside companies to do business in the State shall be extended only to such companies as are under State supervision in the State in which they are incorporated and have $100,000 capital. These amendments are designed to prevent wild-cat companies from issuing policies in New York.

NEW JERSEY SEWER A MENACE.

Gov. Odell Gives Warning That the Waters of the Bay May Be Polluted.

ALBANY, March 12.—Gov. Odell to-day warned the Legislature that the waters of New York Bay are threatened with pollution by a sewer, the construction of which the State of New Jersey is contemplating. He sent to the Legislature this communication from Dr. Daniel Lewis, State Health Commissioner:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the construction of an immense trunk sewer, which is to take the sewage from a large section of the State of New Jersey and discharge it into the waters of this State, is now being considered by the Legislature of New Jersey.

"Unless some provision is made for the discharge of such a large body of sewage at flood tide, or unless some method of treating the sewage is adopted before it is discharged into the waters of the bay, the shores of Staten Island and for long distances beyond Staten Island will likely be covered with deposits from this source, which would be a possible menace to public health.

"It is respectfully suggested that some conference between the authorities of this State and the State of New Jersey might be arranged whereby the deleterious effects of this proposed discharge of sewage may be counteracted or prevented."

The Senate referred the message to the public Health Committee.

Mayor Low Vetoes a Bill.

ALBANY, March 12.—Mayor Low of New York City returned to the Senate to-day without his approval the Marshall bill providing that the Police Commission may pension Caroline M. Fox, an ex-Police Matron. Mayor Low's reason for vetoing the bill was that Mrs. Fox had been a Police Matron for only three years, and there was no reason to believe that she was incapacitated for the performance of her duty.

BILLS SIGNED AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, March 12.—Gov. Odell has signed these bills:

Assemblyman ROGERS'S—Appropriating $255,000 to pay the interest on the canal debt.

Assemblyman ROGERS'S—Releasing to the United States the State's interest in certain property in Southfield, Richmond County.

Assemblyman KNAPP'S—Providing that the Sheriff of Clinton County shall receive an annual salary of $1,500.

Assemblyman NYE'S—Providing that the Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men may elect officers biennially.

Senator L'HOMMEDIEU'S—Incorporating the Volunteer Firemen's Benevolent Association of North Tonawanda.

Assemblyman MORGAN'S—Amending the charter of the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital by providing that not less than six nor more than eleven surgeons actively connected with the institution shall be members of its Board of Directors.

BILLS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

ALBANY, March 12.—These bills were passed in the Senate to-day:

Senator McCABE'S—Exempting the property of medical societies in cities of the first class.

Senator KEENAN'S—Providing that the Board of Estimate of New York shall have the power to fix salaries of County Judges and Surrogate of Queens County.

Assemblyman REYNOLDS'S—Fixing the salary of Acting Superintendent of the Poor of Rensselaer County at $5,500.

Assemblyman SMITH'S—Making the office of Sheriff of Dutchess County salaried.

Assemblyman WEMPLE'S—Creating the office of Coroners' physician in Schenectady County.

These bills were passed in the Assembly:

Assemblyman CHAMBERS'S—Creating a municipal improvement commission in Troy.

Assemblyman PHILLIPS'S—Regulating the payment of rebates in connection with the Liquor Tax law.

Assemblyman HUGHES'S—Providing for the acquisition of a site for a State hospital for the insane in the northeastern part of the State.

Assemblyman MORGAN'S—Permitting Superintendents of insane asylums to admit, in cases of emergency, patients without an order of commitment.

These bills were introduced in the Senate:

By Mr. MARSHALL—Authorizing the extension of the fire alarm system of New York City so as to take in private systems. It authorizes the New York City Fire Commissioner to purchase, with the consent of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, twenty-eight private lines as he may choose, corporate stock of the city to be issued to pay for it.

By Mr. SHERWOOD—Changing the name of Hornellsville to Hornell.

By Mr. STEWART—Authorizing the City of Ithaca to borrow $10,000 annually for three years for permanent highway improvements.

By Mr. MARSHALL—A concurrent resolution providing for the amendment of the State Constitution so as to exclude the water supply bonds of New York City from the operations of the constitutional debt limit of that city.

These bills were introduced in the Assembly:

By Mr. BOSTWICK—Providing that banks in liquidation may be taxed only on their actual, instead of their authorized capital.

By Mr. HORNIDGE—Granting pensions to Judges of the Court of Appeals and Justices of the Supreme Court, "who have served the term for which they were elected, or who have been retired by reason of age or disability." The pension is to be one-half the salary.

By Mr. ULRICH—Forbidding the appointment of foremen, Inspectors, or Supervisors by any public official unless such appointee has been examined and found capable, under a method provided by the State Civil Service Commission.

By Mr. WEBER—Compelling blasters and blasters' helpers in New York City to obtain a certificate of competency before using explosives in that city. The Bureau of Combustibles is to issue the license, and shall also inspect and grant licenses for the storage of combustibles for blasting purposes within the city.

FLOOD PERIL ALONG THE MISSISSIPPI IS GRAVER.

River Rising at Memphis—Convicts Being Rushed to Danger Points to Strengthen Levees.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 12.—There is little change in the river situation to-night, and although the rise to-day has been slight, the situation remains grave, and a stage of more than 38 feet is still expected. The gauge to-night shows 35.8 and rising, an advance of two-tenths since midnight last night.

Dispatches from Carrutherseville say the situation there is practically unchanged, and that the embankments will hold a stage of water three feet greater than at present. These dispatches are from private individuals.

Capt. Lucas, United States Engineer in charge of the First and Second Districts, left here to-day for Helena, Ark., to inspect personally conditions in the White River district. The Government steamboat Mercury left here to-day for Helena with supplies and men for Assistant Engineer Levasseur, who is in charge of the levee strengthening work at that point.

The Robert E. Lee, which left this city to-day for the South, carries supplies and men for the levee engineers at Cat Island, where the rush of the waters through the seventeen-mile gap in the levees is causing uneasiness. The James Lee started today for the North with men and supplies for the engineers at Peckan Point, where strengthening work is in progress on the embankments.

JACKSON, Miss., March 12.—The levee board in session at Clarksdale asks that forces of convicts be rushed to the levee section in Issaquena County, where the embankments are reported to be in great danger. Officials of Sharkey County have requested a supply of tents, as breaks in the levees above will render hundreds of families homeless.

So thoroughly convinced is Gov. Longino that the levees must break to-morrow or next day that he will leave here to-morrow morning for Greenville, whence he will direct the work of the convicts and see to the transportation of State property to places of safety. Warden Henry is now gathering convicts from several State farms, and is hastening them by special trains to points of danger along the river front.

TENTS FOR FLOOD SUFFERERS.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 12.—One hundred tents from the State Arsenal here have been sent to Shawneetown for the relief of the residents there who have been flooded out of their homes by the Ohio River. Assistant Adjt. Ewert has gone there to supervise the erection of the tents and their assignment to the needy. Gov. Yates has also had word from Cairo that many have been driven out of their homes by the water and that food and clothing should be sent there.

To Attend Dinner to ex-Gov. Francis.

Ex-President Cleveland and ex-Secretary Carlisle will attend the dinner to be given by the Missouri Society at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday next to ex-Gov. D. R. Francis of the St. Louis Exposition, who is now in Europe. Senators Cockrell and Stone, accompanied by Senators Platt and Depew, will to-day extend an invitation to President Roosevelt, whose attendance is confidently expected. Acting on the suggestion in a telegram sent yesterday to Corwin N. Spencer, Vice President of the Louisiana Purchase Commission, a meeting of the St. Louis Club was held in that city last night, and it was decided to send a delegation of 100 Missourians on a special train to participate in the banquet.

OILS AND WATER COLORS SOLD

King, Fuller, Weil, and Newcomb Collections at Auction—Incidents of the Evening.

Water colors and oil paintings belonging to the collections of the late Clarence King, William H. Fuller, Theodore Weil, and H. Victor Newcomb were sold last night at Mendelssohn Hall, Fortieth Street, near Broadway, under the auspices of the American Art Association. Thirty-four water colors brought $6,155, and sixty-eight paintings brought the total for the evening's sale to $30,205.

The tedium of slow bidding was relieved by an unusual mistake on the part of Thomas E. Kirby, the auctioneer. There was a picture entitled "The Mothers." When it was shown Mr. Kirby ordered it taken back, as there should be, he said, two female figures, one dressed in yellow and the other in black. The picture exhibited was of a sheep and her lamb and a little black hen and her brood.

The next picture was the one with the two figures as described. The bidders knew that the title for this was "After the Ball." They began hurling remarks at the auctioneer, asking him if sheep and hens could not be mothers and "How many balls is it after?" The auctioneer acknowledged his mistake, and the sale went on.

"T. Sidney Cooper" is a new expression of art profanity, the outcome of the evening. When Mr. Kirby was offered $200 for Cooper's "Morning in the Highlands," he ejaculated the name of the artist in a way that made it sound very much like something else. There was the moment of horrified suspense, and when what he had said was understood, a burst of laughter and applause followed. The name took the fancy of the bidders, and when disappointed they would use it with great emphasis.

The highest price of the evening was $2,050 for Jules Dupré's "Morning." The pictures, their painters, purchasers, and the successful bids follow:

PAINTINGS SOLD AT WALDORF.

J. N. Thornton of Texas Paid $5,300 for Breton's "The Gleaner"—Total for Sale, $18,612.50.

In the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria James P. Silo disposed last night of seventy-one paintings of the collection of Arthur Furber and eleven paintings, engravings, and drawings of the family collection of the Misses de Peyster. These pictures constituted the first night's sale, eighty-four remaining to be sold to-night. In the large crowd present at the sale were many well-known art fanciers, and several Commissioners, who were said to be buying for well-known New Yorkers. The bidding at times was spirited, but the prices paid in most cases were low, according to the views of the auctioneer.

The highest price paid for a single picture was $5,300, by J. N. Thornton of Houston, Texas, for a pastel, "The Gleaner," by Jules Breton. C. E. Snedecor paid $1,100 for Henri Harpignies's "Landscape," while J. L. Rafferty gave $400 for a small work, only four inches by six, entitled "Sheep," by Rosa Bonheur. The total of the sales amounted to $18,612.50. Some of the pictures sold, the artists, the buyers, and the prices were:

LONDON OLD BOYS DINE.

Frederick Twinch Declares British Imperial Unity Was Proved on South African Battlefields.

The London Old Boys' Association of Greater New York, an organization composed of the ex-residents of London, Ontario, who now reside in and about New York City, held their annual banquet at the St. Denis Hotel last night. J. Fred Cryer, President of the association, presided.

The guest of honor and speaker of the evening was Frederick Twinch. Speeches were also made by George Morehead, Robert Graves, W. A. Cooper, E. Plummer, Dr. F. J. C. Fitzgerald, Dr. George Hunt, and Sidney Chadwick.

Definite arrangements were perfected for the gathering in London, Ont., of the members of the association and their wives and also other ex-residents of London who may wish to join in making the trip. The "home gathering," as it is called, will be in August.

Mr. Twinch said that he was present as an Englishman of Englishmen by right of birth, as he was born "'neath the shadow of the great Castle at Windsor," and told of the "essential oneness" and the "practical unity" of the British Empire, saying in part:

"At Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee the absolute imperial unity of the world-wide empire was declared, but it was on the bloody battlefields of South Africa that it was absolutely proved, the fact being written not with ink, but with the heart's blood of many a son of Canada, of Australia, and of New Zealand. These heroes' blood is the cement binding in imperishable strength the great fusion of imperial unity and power."

Dinner to Charles S. Francis.

A complimentary dinner to Charles S. Francis, owner and editor of the Troy (N. Y.) Times, was given at the Gregorian Hotel last evening, to celebrate the return of Mr. Francis to this country, after his two years of public service at Athens as the American Minister to Greece. The dinner was given by John A. Sleicher, editor of Leslie's Weekly. The guests included ex-Gov. Black, Charles Emory Smith, Collector Stranahan, J. Edward Simmons, Pomeroy Burton, Melville E. Stone, Charles S. Gleed, Hammond Lamont, Judge E. F. Colburn of Salt Lake City, Frank A. Munsey, Louis Stern, and C. H. Boynton.

BILLIARD CLUB OPENED

Headquarters for Amateurs in West Seventy-ninth Street.

Prominent Devotees of the Cue Present—Tables Well Arranged and Tournaments May Be Held.

With the laudable intention of providing a place where true lovers of billiards can play under ideal conditions, the Amateur Billiard Club of New York, 113 and 115 Seventy-ninth Street, opened its rooms to the members and their guests last night. Some three or four hundred persons responded to the invitations, and all expressed their approval.

The club is the first organization of its kind in this city, and practically every amateur of standing in this vicinity is included in its membership. Among the prominent players contesting at the different tables last night were Ferdinand Poggenburg, one of the contestants in the recent championship tournament; Dr. Walter G. Douglas, the champion of the New York Athletic Club, Dr. A. B. Miller of the old Knickerbocker Athletic Club, and Dr. Miel, who has competed in all of the championship tournaments held under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union. Edward McLaughlin, the professional player, was also there, and he beat Mr. Poggenburg in a 200-point eighteen-inch balkline match by the score of 200 to 113. Mr. McLaughlin's average was 13 5-15. Poggenburg also played a game with Dr. Douglas.

A novel feature is the fact that no member is required to pay dues. All that is necessary in order to join the club is a certificate of membership, and this is obtained through election by the Board of Governors on the payment of $50. Only 300 of these certificates will be issued, and at present 125 have been taken.

The main room is well lighted by windows in the front and rear, and its claim to sufficient ventilation was borne out by the exceptional conditions prevailing last night. This room, which is 85 by 55 feet, with a ceiling 20 feet high, has twelve tables, nine of which are given up to billiards and the remaining three to pool. The tables are so arranged that all interference between players on contiguous tables is avoided, and this fact was appreciated very much last night.

The lighting also came in for considerable praise. Three extra large shades made of aluminium and devised by Albro Akin were suspended over each table. An iron rod joined the shades, and made it an easy matter to push them to one side whenever they interfered with the making of a shot. The Governing Board intends to keep the tables in as perfect shape as possible, and to have true balls and straight cues, properly tipped.

Both pool and billiard tournaments will be held in the near future, but they will be limited to members of the club. Several of the more prominent players among the members have already signified their intention of competing in a billiard tournament, and this will probably be held next month.

It is also proposed to make the club more or less of a social organization, and with this purpose in view at least one night each month will be set aside for women. A room 18 feet by 55 also makes it possible to have private tables, and this room will probably be used for dinners and the serving of refreshments.

The running of the club is under the control of a Board of Governors, made up of the following men: President William L. Gerrish, Vice President David J. Burtis, Secretary Walter G. Douglas, Treasurer Albro Akin, and Franklyn Paddock, Howard Colby, Richard C. Strong, E. O. Presby, James J. Batterson, Jr., John H. Porges, William Gershel, Duncan P. Squire, A. E. Hoyt, William W. Farlin, and Frederick N. Drake.

Governors for Turf and Field Club.

The annual meeting of the Turf and Field Club was held yesterday afternoon at the office of the club, Windsor Arcade, Fifth Avenue and Forty-sixth Street. The President, Perry Belmont, presided. The following Board of Governors was elected for the ensuing year: Francis R. Appleton, J. J. Astor, Perry Belmont, August Belmont, R. F. Carroll, A. J. Cassatt, W. A. Chanler, J. E. Cowdin, J. C. Follansbee, G. G. Haven, Center Hitchcock, F. R. Hitchcock, A. Iselin, Jr., C. Oliver Iselin, Brayton Ives, H. K. Knapp, E. C. La Montagne, C. H. Mackay, Ogden Mills, E. D. Morgan, J. P. Morgan, E. C. Potter, W. H. Sands, John Sanford, F. K. Sturgis, Nathaniel Thayer, R. B. Van Courtlandt, William C. Whitney, R. D. Winthrop, and P. T. Wilson, Jr.

Columbia May Have No Track Team.

A mass meeting of Columbia students will be held to-day to determine the important question of whether or not there is to be a track team this year. There are few candidates for the team and little general interest among the students. There are a number of good men in the university who can run and won't, and this lack of interest has heartily discouraged those who really have the interests of the track team at heart. E. W. Hjertberg, the track team trainer, is authority for the statement that if there is a track team and no more candidates appear he will reduce the squad so that it will consist only of a few men, and, letting everything else go, train them only for the intercollegiate meets. Among the prominent Columbia men who are expected to address the meeting are J. Howard Van Amringe, Dean of the college; G. M. Hammond, a former winner in the intercollegiate half-mile and quarter-mile events; W. T. Lawson, former Captain of the track team, and Gustavus T. Kirby, Chairman of the Intercollegiate Track Association. The election of assistant manager of the track team will also be held, to succeed F. W. Muller, resigned. F. H. Sprague and R. H. Bradley are the nominees.

Columbia's basket ball team will play its last game of the season with Cornell in the Columbia gymnasium to-night. Columbia having defeated Cornell at Ithaca, has little doubt of winning, and, if so, it will clinch Columbia's hold on second place.

Fournier Wins Motor Cycle Race.

LONDON, March 12.—In a motor bicycle race at the suburb of Canning Town this afternoon, for $5,000, Fournier, the French auto oblist, beat Charles Barden of England in three straight mile heats. The times were, With flying start, 1:14 3-5 and 1:18 2-5; with standing start, 1:23 3-5. The attendance numbered 4,000 persons.

Skating Carnival at St. Nicholas Rink.

The first Grand Masquerade Carnival in this city since 1897 will be held this evening at the St. Nicholas Rink. Three hundred couples have entered to skate in the grand march, which begins at 9:45. The first event of the evening will be a hockey game between Cutler and St. Paul Schools at 8 o'clock. Champion Quinn will give an exhibition of high jumping on skates, and George C. Davis, who will join the Barnum & Bailey Circus, will "shoot the chutes" on bicycle skates from a 92-foot incline. The last regular event on the programme is the one-mile championship race in which Dorlon, Swan, McDonald, Kearney, Stoll, Barony, and Tellifar will compete.

Games for Princeton Golf Club.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 12.—The university golf management announced to-day the following schedule of games to be played this Spring: April 15, eighteen-hole medal-play handicap match at Princeton for cup presented by the Captain; April 18, Lawrenceville at Princeton; April 25, Essex County Golf Club at Orange, N. J.; May 2, Yale, course to be decided later; May 9, Englewood Golf Club at Englewood, N. J.; May 16, Garden City Golf Club at Garden City, L. I.

Wrestlers to Meet To-night.

At the Madison Square Garden to-night "Tom" Jenkins of Cleveland will attempt to throw "Jack" Munroe, the big miner pugilist, four times within an hour in a handicap wrestling match, catch-as-catch-can style. A special mat, 75 feet square, has been made for this contest, which will be laid in the centre of the floor space of the big building, so that the men will not roll off, as was the case in previous bouts between expert wrestlers. As a preliminary, the "Cuban Wonder," who is one of Jenkins's partners, will undertake to throw any three men who will face him within thirty minutes. "Tim" Hurst will referee all the bouts.

TWO-YEAR AGREEMENT.

Terms of the Yale-Harvard Athletic Meets Ratified, but No Longer for Five Years—Football is Retained.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 12.—Walter Camp, the Yale athletic chairman, gave out the Yale-Harvard athletic agreement early this morning, after the Yale committee had ratified it. The document is long and includes a number of new agreements, among them an Arbitration Committee to whom all disputes are to be taken; a two-year repeating agreement as to meets, a rule declaring ineligible for freshman athletic organizations all graduates of other colleges, and local reference committees for eligibility questions at each university.

The agreement which came at the end of a prolonged series of meetings is for the four usual events in the Yale-Harvard calendar—football, baseball, crew, and track athletics—but is for two years, instead of five as formerly. An Arbitration Committee will consist of three members, Messrs. William Melkelham, Columbia; R. D. Wrenn, Harvard, and Otto T. Bannard, Yale. Each undergraduate Captain is to be responsible for the eligibility of the men on his own team, but a "reference committee," consisting of three graduates, is to be selected at each university before Oct. 1 of each year, with whom the Captain may confer. All protests or questions as to eligibility will be referred to the Arbitration Committee. They must be made three weeks before a game.

The new rules are not retroactive. They provide that no man is eligible unless a bona fide student for a degree; that if a man is dropped from his class or is on probation he is ineligible; that four years in all colleges constitute a career, and that no man can join a freshman team if he is a graduate of any other institution.

SAY TRUST FOMENTED STRIKES

Copper Combination Believed to Have Caused the Labor Difficulties in British Columbia.

Special to The New York Times.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 12.—Strikes have occurred in quick succession in this province, and the charge is advanced by persons who should understand the situation that the New York Copper Trust has been at the back of them.

It is asserted that capitalists, in order to cut off the British Columbia copper supply and thus keep up the price of the commodity, have subsidized certain labor agitators in the Western Federation of Labor, who fomented the strike at the Vernie coal mines which supplied coal and coke to smelters in the interior copper producing country in British Columbia.

This supposed scheme was frustrated by the smelters getting a coke supply from the Vancouver Island mines of James Dunsmuir. The strike on the Canadian Pacific Railroad followed, and the employes refused to handle this coal and coke, thus cutting off the supply. At the same time trouble was fomented in Dunsmuir's mines at Extension, and the owner decided to close them rather than have the Western Federation of Miners, controlled by foreign leaders, dictate to him.

As he owns other mines at Comox he is able to supply present demands and keep the extension mines closed. Unionism was never strong at Comox. Mr. Dunsmuir is thus able to frustrate the designs of the union workers.

Many who have followed the strike situation in this province readily believe that the Copper Trust is concerned in it.

PREPARING FOR BIG LINER.

Director Leist of the North German Lloyd Line arrived yesterday on board the Barbarossa for the purpose of inspecting the work on the line's piers in Hoboken, especially Pier No. 2, that should be ready on April 20. Soon after that date the new Kaiser Wilhelm II. will arrive and use the pier.

The architect who has had charge of the work was in Bremen less than a month ago, and at that time he assured the North German Lloyd officials that the pier would surely be ready. "I preferred to come over and see for myself," said Herr Leist, adding that the Cunard pier, at which some of the vessels of his line dock, would not answer the needs of the new vessel. He said that the company hopes to make the Kaiser Wilhelm II. the fastest steamship afloat.

She is equipped with engines capable of 40,000 horse power. The Deutschland has about 37,000 and the Kronprinz about 34,000. The second named ship belongs to the Hamburg-American Line. She holds the record for speed at present.

It is expected that the new

SAYS HE GAVE $2,500 TO BRIBE CAPT. TITUS

Dr. Flower Accuses Meloy of Larceny and Both Are Arrested.

The Physician Held on Charge of Bribery; Also on Larceny Charge Preferred by a Woman—Titus Makes Flat Denial.

Dr. R. C. Flower, who as the friend and adviser of Theodore Hagaman and his widow, Mrs. Walter E. Delabarre, has figured prominently in the litigation over the Hagaman fortune, was arrested twice yesterday. The first time was when he appeared in the Tombs Police Court to answer a summons obtained by Mrs. Isabelle Gray Taylor of 414 West One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, who charged him with having obtained $300 from her on false and fraudulent representations. His second arrest was on a charge of attempting to bribe Capt. Titus of the Detective Bureau.

When the Taylor case was called Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who is conducting the investigation into the death of Theodore Hagaman and the disposal of his wealth, out of which a large slice was given by the widow to Dr. Flower, told Magistrate Barlow that the basis of Mrs. Taylor's complaint was a fraudulent mining stock transaction, and that she was only one out of 1,200 stockholders who had been victimized in the same way. For that reason Mr. Garvan insisted that a warrant charging grand larceny be issued against Dr. Flower. Magistrate Barlow consented, and Detective Sergeant McConville arrested the promoter in the courtroom. His bail was fixed in $2,000, which was furnished by Mrs. Cornelia Storrs, the widow of ex-Controller Richard S. Storrs, who is said to be worth half a million dollars and to be heavily interested in one of the Flower projects. The examination was set for Monday.

The second arrest, which really furnished the sensation of the day, occurred in the afternoon, when Dr. Flower again made his appearance in the Tombs Police Court, this time as a complainant against his ex-partner, Andrew D. Meloy. Dr. Flower charged Meloy with having obtained from him $2,500 as a bribe for Inspector Titus, then a Captain, in charge of the Detective Bureau.

For a long time Meloy and Flower, who have dissolved their partnership, have been at daggers drawn over some of the mining property they promoted. Mr. Meloy, as an act of war, furnished the corroborating affidavit on which Dr. Flower was arrested in the case of Mrs. Taylor. The complaint of Dr. Flower against Meloy was by way of retribution, but it acted as a boomerang. Magistrate Barlow, after reading the affidavit of Dr. Flower, ordered a warrant issued for the arrest of the complainant, and held him on a charge of bribery—a graver one than that which he had preferred against Meloy. The latter was charged with misappropriation of $2,500.

The allegations made against Meloy by Dr. Flower date back from last Fall, when a druggist of Naugatuck, Conn., whose name is Brennan, and who had invested in one of Dr. Flower's mining schemes, had caused a warrant, charging grand larceny, to be issued against him. The warrant had been placed in the hands of Detective Sergeant Gargan of Capt. Titus's staff. At about the same time a number of other stockholders of the Arizona, Eastern and Montana Mining Company, another of Dr. Flower's schemes, began to become troublesome and make visits to the Detective Bureau.

In his affidavit Dr. Flower says that on Oct. 4 last year Andrew D. Meloy called him into his private office at 23 Broad Street, where he and Meloy at that time were in business together, and told him that he had spent several hours the night before with Capt. Titus, with whom he claimed to be on terms of close friendship. Meloy according to the affidavit then told Flower that Capt. Titus had said that unless Dr. Flower sent him through Meloy $2,500 neither Flower nor the firm of Meloy & Co. could do business any longer in New York. Capt. Titus was also quoted by Meloy as saying that unless the money was sent, Flower would at once be arrested on a warrant in the hands of Detective Sergeant Gargan.

Meloy, it is alleged in the document, also told Flower that he had remonstrated with Capt. Titus, and had pointed out how the doctor had already made several liberal payments to the Detective Bureau through him, whereupon Capt. Titus is said to have replied that he would not take that sort of talk, and that it must be understood that when he made a demand of this nature the money must be forthcoming at once or action would be taken. The detectives, Capt. Titus is further quoted by Meloy as having said, were already hot on the trail of Flower, and it would take something to allay their ardor and especially to conciliate Gargan.

At this point Dr. Flower presents himself in an attitude of righteous indignation. "This is high-handed blackmail, and I will never submit to it," he quotes himself as saying. Then follows a narrative of protestations by Meloy, who by that time is represented as having grown hot and angry. Meloy told Flower, according to the statement, that all business concerns in Wall Street had to pay heavy blackmail to the police; that especially those who had gotten into trouble had to pay large tribute to Capt. Titus, and that this really was less than what was usually demanded. Dr. Flower says that after some more demurring he told Meloy to draw $6,500 against his account for this and other expenses, and that he handed the check over in the presence of several witnesses, who furnish corroborative affidavits in the case.

After about an hour, he says, Meloy returned, wiping the perspiration from his forehead, and said he had a conversation with Capt. Titus over the telephone, and that the money had been paid in the nick of time, as the Captain was in the act of sending several disgruntled investors who had come to him with their complaints to the District Attorney's office.

The corroborating affidavits in the case are furnished by John S. Manfull, a clerk, who says he made out the check; Pierre M. Looker Jewell, Flower's son of the doctor, and William Henry Donnally. They were all in court.

After reading the affidavits through, Magistrate Barlow said he would hold Meloy in $1,000 bail on a charge of grand larceny. Then he held a whispered conversation with Assistant District Attorney Garvan, at the close of which he announced that he would order the arrest of Dr. Flower on a charge of attempted bribery of a public official. The complaint was made by Mr. Garvan himself.

Dr. Flower, who had been seated with his lawyer, Mr. Hannicker of the firm of O'Hanon, Hannicker, Stuart & Silk, enjoying a brief triumph in seeing his former partner and present foe arraigned before the Magistrate, started in surprise as Detective Sergeant McConville tapped him on the shoulder and declared him under arrest.

When the question of bail came up Mr. Garvan asked that the amount be fixed in $5,000. Mr. Hannicker remonstrated and declared that, in view of the fact that his client had come forward without any promise of immunity on the part of the District Attorney and had given information which might lead to the punishment of an official for a crime against the community, he thought the doctor should be paroled in his custody. Magistrate Barlow said this was preposterous and fixed bail at $3,000, which was furnished. The case was set down for Monday.

Mr. Meloy, when asked about the charges made against him, said that he had never seen Inspector Titus and that not a word of the affidavit was true.

"I don't know what their motive is," he said, "but they seem bent on my destruction. It is too bad. Thousands of stockholders will be made to suffer through our fight. I don't know what will become of the Lone Pine Company if this goes on much longer."

Dr. Flower declined to say anything for publication.

Inspector George Titus, when interviewed later, said:

"Why, I never saw either of them. I don't know either man. I never got a cent from Flower or Meloy. If either of them says I did, then I'll certainly go to law to recover for such an accusation. That matter was investigated, and it was shown that Dr. Flower gave Meloy some money, but I never got any money from those men."

To Exhume Hagaman's Body To-day.

Assistant District Attorney Garvan yesterday received a telegram from Detective Brindley, who has gone to Poughkeepsie to arrange for the exhumation of the body of Theodore Hagaman, informing him that all was in readiness. The body will be exhumed to-day. Mr. Hagaman died at the Waldorf on Sept. 11, 1900, while under the care of Dr. Flower and his wife, who later became Mrs. Delabarre. Isaac Hagaman, a brother of the deceased, will go to Poughkeepsie to identify the body.

BROOKS ANSWERS GREENE.

Commissioner Not Yet Prepared to Make the Inspector's Letter Public.

Inspector Nicholas Brooks took to Gen. Francis V. Greene's office yesterday morning a reply to the Commissioner's interpellation of last Monday in relation to evidence against gambling houses and the work of the Inspector's Detective Bureau in relation thereto. Gen. Greene's action was taken because of the success of out-of-town detectives in getting evidence against the gambling houses of "Lou" Betts and "Mike" Meagher, which were raided on Saturday. In his letter to the Inspector he did not refer to this, but recalled that at the beginning of last month he informed him that the entire force was at his disposal to obtain evidence against gambling houses and that all the funds he asked for for this purpose were given him. Gen. Greene finally asked if he had obtained such evidence, and if not why he had failed.

Inspector Brooks yesterday would not speak of his letter except to say that it was a long one and that, so far as he was concerned, he would be glad to see it made public. Curiosity in regard to the letter was only partly gratified by Gen. Greene.

"I have a reply from Inspector Brooks in regard to gambling," he said, "but I am not going to give it out to-day, and will not say when I will make it public. It's quite long, and I haven't read it all. It's an important matter, and I'm going to study it. I cannot at present give a suggestion as to the nature of the reply to me, and I will not make it public until after I have read it very carefully."

Must Reinstate Detective Sugden.

Commissioner Greene said he had received a mandamus issued by Justice O'Gorman directing him to place on duty and on the payroll Edward D. Sugden, W. S. Devery's "Man Friday," who by a decision of the Court of Appeals was judged to have been wrongfully deprived of his rank as Detective Sergeant. Gen. Greene said that as a matter of form the papers would go to the Corporation Counsel. If he reinstated Sugden he would probably have to reinstate five other demoted Detective Sergeants whose cases are similar to his. In the Murphy administration 152 Detective Sergeants, all of whom were sent to patrol duty since Jan. 1, 1902, were created.

Cortright Denies Resignation Rumor.

"Nothing in it," said, yesterday, Chief Inspector Moses W. Cortright of a story that he had decided on retiring from the Police Department. "Of course," he added, "I'm going to 'get out' some time or another, but for the last ten years I've been put out every two or three weeks, and this has brought me to say 'If you see it in the papers 'tain't so.'"

PRAISES NEW YORK'S POLICE.

Count von Bernsdorf Submits a Report to the Kaiser—How He Chanced to be Sent Here.

BERLIN, March 12.—Count von Bernsdorf, President of the Potsdam Police, who recently returned to Germany from the United States, has submitted to Emperor William a written narrative of his experiences and observations in America, with appreciative notes on the New York police.

The Police President and his five traveling companions, four young guardsmen and a junior attaché of the diplomatic service, happened to be sent in this manner: The Emperor was talking to a group of subalterns at the Casino of Potsdam early in December, and asked them where they were going for their holidays. One was going to Paris and another intended to visit Bohemia.

"Why don't you go where you can learn something?" interrupted his Majesty. "Go to America. You shall go as my guests and tell me all about it when you come home."

The Emperor thereupon selected a party, including Count von Bernsdorf. His Majesty, who paid all the expenses, has a permanent arrangement with the German steamship lines for reduced transportation rates for his guests. The party, after reaching New York on Jan. 7 on the Hamburg-American liner Moltke, went on the same steamer through the West Indies, and afterward spent three weeks in New York, returning on the Hamburg-American liner Graf Waldersee.

Count von Bernsdorf, with a Detective Sergeant detailed by Police Commissioner Greene, studied the police system of New York. The thing which most astonished him was that he was not bothered in the streets by women. The Count told a newspaper correspondent that he especially admired the size of the New York policemen, their smart uniforms, and their courtesy, and he referred in his report to the large, well-ordered police stations of New York and contrasted them with the rented rooms occupied by the Berlin police.

"But," the Count added, using a recent addition to his vocabulary, "the Americans have money to throw at the birds."

Since his return Count von Bernsdorf has timed the Berlin firemen in responding to calls. He found that it takes three or four minutes to start an engine here, and contrasted this with New York's thirty seconds to do the same thing.

LONDON AND NEW YORK POLICE.

Ex-British Policeman's Explanation of the London Force's Efficiency.

Second Deputy Police Commissioner Piper gave out last night the following copy of a letter which he had received during the day. He refused to tell the writer's name:

The Hon. Capt. A. R. Piper:

Sir: I have just read your comments on the London police, and as an ex-member of that body permit me to say that you forgot to mention something that makes all the difference between the New York and London police. That is, that a London policeman is not afraid to do his duty for fear some politician will go over his head and have him called down, but is terribly afraid that if he don't do his full duty without fear or favor to any one he will lose his position, and he knows that if he is guilty of graft he will save him. If you can get that idea into the heads of New York policemen you will have a police force that will be second to none.

Capt. Piper would make no comment on the letter.

PIPER AND THE LONDON POLICE

A New York "Cop" Compares the Methods Obtaining Here and in the British Metropolis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In you issue of March 10 I see where Capt. Piper, hot from Edward's Islands, states that the New York police compare very unfavorably with the London police. Capt. Piper in his interview has uttered a few things that are facts, a few things that are not facts, and left unsaid considerable that are facts. I happen to know something of the subject I write about, and I assure your readers my information was not gleaned in a few days between the American Embassy, a drive in Hyde Park, and "rubbering" around the walls of Buckingham Palace.

Piper reminds me of the man who writes a book upon the habits and manners of a people through whose country he has passed in a railroad train. The New York police, if courageously directed, can cope with a riotous crowd much better than the London police. That was proved when 1,400 New York policemen, thrown into Brooklyn a few years ago, accomplished more in a few days than the whole First Brigade of the National Guard did a few years previous. The London police are always younger because they are better treated, better housed, and are not weighted down by a lot of old barnacles held in sinecures by ward politicians.

Married men are accepted into the London force and into every force in the United Kingdom save the Royal Irish Constabulary, where they must have seven years' service before they can obtain permission to marry. This is a wise provision, as the men become more worldly-wise, and, as the smaller salaries they receive would link themselves and their families to poverty, and the local stand of the force would thus be reduced. The London police are paid by the week and are supplied with two suits of uniform and two pairs of shoes yearly. The single men mess in the station and are allowed fuel and light, bed, and bedding. The station houses have all the comforts of a clubhouse—reading room, dining room, &c., with a ball court attached to each, not the filthy, unsanitary dens that do duty for station houses in New York.

The tours are arranged as under the three platoon plan, in monthly shifts, two by night and one by day. There is no such thing as extra work or "reserve" as here. There are always sufficient men on the streets to cope with the street brawls for which they here order out a reserve. In cases of strikes or extraordinary riots the military are always called out. In busy and troublesome streets there is a man on either side.

Did Piper hear of such a thing in London as a ward politician walking into the Commissioner's office and demanding the transfer of a policeman for doing police duty? Did Piper hear of the Mayor of London issuing permission to a certain class to violate the acts of Parliament, or does he believe he would be obeyed if he did? Did Piper hear of the Mayor of London adroitly trimming his canvas to catch the veering breeze, issuing secret orders to District Inspectors to allow the publicans of London to violate the provisions of the licensing act? Did Piper spend a day in the Bow Street Police Court and note how police cases are dealt with there? Would Piper hear the presiding Magistrate there score a policeman for making an arrest that was not in line with the unlawful policy of a partisan Mayor? Would Piper see a prisoner sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and when the policeman came on post next night see that same criminal standing on the corner grinning at him?

If a prisoner gives a London policeman a fight the policeman makes three separate and distinct charges against him, viz.: The primary charge and the two additional charges of "resisting arrest" and "assaulting a constable while in the discharge of his duty." The penalty for each is separate and cumulative, and you may bet your last tanner the Magistrate will give him the length and breadth of the act of Parliament.

The fundamental principle of English law is that it never must command where it cannot compel. In London the police are invariably supported by the judiciary and assisted, not thwarted, by the prosecuting officials. No venal politicians can get the Magistrate's ear and have your prisoner discharged, and no corrupt Crown Prosecutor can pigeonhole an indictment there. If a policeman proves his case there you may depend upon it his prisoner will enjoy the luxury of a Government haircut before he sees him again.

Does Piper imagine for a moment that the London "bobby" would be deprived of his resting hours to attend stupid drills and parades? If the London Commissioner was guilty of such ineffable idiocy, Kier Hardie or "Labby" would have the Home Secretary on the spit every night in the House of Commons. Did Piper hear of a spy, who spends most of his time in some music hall or brothel, come out and make a complaint against an officer for twelve minutes' conversation to a citizen?

Piper did not say to the New York reporters that there are more complaints made against the New York policeman in one week than there is made against the whole London force in one year. The London Commissioner has intelligence enough to understand the difference between a civil officer who obtains his position by warrant of appointment and an enlisted instrument of warfare that knows no right but might and no justice save the sweet will of the Corporal. Piper thinks the London police should be "smartly fined," because they don't keep trotting around like the New York men trying to dodge the spy Roundsmen. If one of these fellows appeared in London he'd soon find himself taking a mud-bath in the Thames.

Piper did not see in London superannuated Inspectors and Chiefs disport themselves like feudal Princes in steam yachts, having blocks of real estate, and fast horses. Did Piper find that institution known in New York as the wardman, whose sole duty it is to graft and pass it up, minus the 10 per cent.?

Piper seems to be much pleased with the manner in which they "get rid of a man with a suspicious record." Think you, Capt. Piper, would they make a Divisional Inspector of a self-confessed blackmailer and perjurer, a man who admits he has wallowed in the deepest depths of reeking infamy? They don't hang their weasellers; it is true, but give such men a job as turnkey in a prison at Botany Bay or St. Helena.

The London "bobby" is not utterly frozen out by the wardman, as in New York. He does make an odd stamp on the outside. It cannot be called blackmail—rather is it known as "tips." A London "bobby" expects to get his "tuppence" for answering a question, and if Piper offered it he would see how quickly he would take it. He also makes a few "bobs" in arousing workmen who reside on his post and who want to be called at a particular time; and he collects small money every Saturday night as regularly as he does his salary. In New York the wardman would collect that and the poor "cop" would get pounded if he made the slightest kick.

The "bobby" does get his free "boose." Mr. Piper, and you could have seen this if you traveled around you have alone in New York. You could see the barmaid hand him out his little flask, and this despite the fact that it is a violation of the licensing act "to supply liquor by gift or sale to any policeman on duty."

Piper omits to say that the police in London have vastly greater powers under the above act than the New York men have under the liquor tax law. A policeman there can demand admission into licensed premises at any hour of the day or night, and if he is refused he can have the proprietor prosecuted, and a conviction for any violation of the act is indorsed upon the license.

Piper omits to tell the reporters that the fat pensions of high officials in London are not paid from the sick time and outrageous fines on patrolmen, as is the case in New York. There is no such thing as deductions for sick time, and the maximum fine is £1, to be deducted at the rate of 10s. per month. There is no cowardly Captain to urge complaints. If a constable is found in proof the Inspector calls him into his office and advises him and the number of scalps upon a superior's girdle will count little toward his advancement.

The Commissioner is appointed by the Government, not by the Mayor, as here. Piper did not find in London little more than half the force doing all the work and the rest all on velvet. Did Piper go through the Euston station and find a hundred city police doing the private work of the railway company? On the contrary, he would have seen several employes scattered around the premises with the words "Railway Police" on their caps.

Did Piper hear of civil service examination papers for appointments and promotions being sold to candidates before the examination? Did Piper hear of examiners demanding a large corruption swag, and if the stuff was not forthcoming killing off the candidate? Did Piper hear of promotions made, and still being made, from lists built upon falsified records and long green? Did Piper take them in London get rid of the mean fifty-cent quarter of the Alwell stripe and decorate with gold lace and velvet the man who grafts by the thousand?

TO FILTER ITHACA WATER

Cornell University Lends Company $150,000 for That Purpose.

President Schurman Declares Institution Will Not Close as Long as Any Students Remain.

ITHACA, March 12.—The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Cornell University this evening signed an agreement with the Ithaca Water Works Company by which the university loans the water company $150,000 for the construction of a filtration plant for the City of Ithaca.

President Schurman appeared before the Ithaca City Council three weeks ago and made an offer of this loan if the city would allow the water company to increase its rates enough to pay one-fourth of the interest on the loan. That proposition was agreed to by the city. The university then made its offer to the water company, imposing the one condition that the filtration plant be completed by September next and that the university approve of the plans.

The water company employed Allen Hazen, an engineer, of New York City, and plans drawn up by him were approved today by the Trustees. The proposed filtration plant will be of the rapid-sand type. Work upon the filter at the Cornell reservoir for the water system that supplies the university campus already has been started.

President Schurman gave out the following statement to-night:

The question of a Summer session is in abeyance, depending upon future conditions. The university certainly will not close its doors, at present, for as long as there are any students in Ithaca to receive instruction. A very conservative estimate, based upon attendance at classes throughout the university to-day, indicates that fully one-third of the students who left town at the height of the epidemic have returned to their work, and more are coming back every day. The university is morally bound to give instruction to these students, and the 1,500 who have stayed throughout the epidemic. There is no doubt that the university will open next Fall.

It is President Schurman's practice to visit Cornell Infirmary and its two annexes every day. He said this evening that he had seen every one of the student patients late this afternoon and found every one of them, without exception, improving. Two Cornell convalescents were discharged today. Among the students the President said, the situation is most satisfactory.

The typhoid fever epidemic has brought up a new question of dormitories on the campus for Cornell's men students, and there is some sentiment among the students in favor of the movement. The Cornell Daily Sun says to-day:

Probably there is nothing that would have a better effect upon the general public at the present time than the erection of a large dormitory, having perfect sanitary arrangements. There can be no doubt that the announcement of Cornell's intention to erect such a building would have on prospective students a reassuring effect, to be equalled only by the announcement that the city will have pure water.

Referring to that question, President Schurman said to-night: "The effect of the epidemic is to emphasize the need for such student homes, where the university can have direct supervision over its students. In every annual report of the Trustees for the last ten years I have urged the erection of dormitories, because I consider them a vital element in student life. I believe that the mere living together has as great an educational value for young men as the instruction and influence of their professors. The esprit du corps, which is considered so notably lacking at Cornell, is strong at Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, primarily because those universities possess dormitories. The disaster of the present year has reinforced these arguments more than anything else could have done. I have received many letters to this effect during the past month.

"We cannot build dormitories, however, without gifts from outside. We hope that men of means who are interested in the university will be impressed by this evidence of the great need for student homes and will come forward with financial aid."

HARRIMAN-KEENE POOL FIGHT.

Union Pacific Interests Deny Spending Southern Pacific Earnings Entirely on Central Pacific.

Representatives of the Union Pacific Railway, the directing interests in which were attacked on Wednesday, in a circular issued by the representatives of the Keene pool in Southern Pacific, for alleged mismanagement of that road, were inclined yesterday to make light of the attack, saying that it was hardly worth while to dignify such charges with a reply, but stating that if an answer should be necessary either at the stockholders' meeting or in court a complete and detailed refutation would be forthcoming.

They did, however, deny absolutely that they were spending money earned by the main line of the Southern Pacific entirely on the Central Pacific Branch. They also stated that the $60,000,000 spent on improvements, to which the circular made reference, was the total amount spent during a period of about fifteen years, or at the rate of about $4,000,000 a year, which on a property of 8,000 miles was absolutely insufficient.

They stated that on the Union Pacific during the three years of the receivership much larger sums had been spent, and that the Harriman management in the following two years had spent $3,000,000 more on the Union Pacific before any dividends were declared.

ALBANY AND HUDSON TRANSFER.

New Corporation Takes Over Company Impoverished by Disasters.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 12.—The Albany and Hudson Railroad Company was incorporated to-day with a capital of $27,000,000. The company has acquired the property and franchises of the Albany and Hudson Railway and Power Company, which operates the third rail electric line from this city to Hudson.

The property and franchises were acquired after the latter company had gone into the hands of a receiver consequent upon two collisions which impoverished it. The Directors are H. G. Runkle, C. L. Rossiter, A. M. Young, Foster M. Vorhees, William F. Sheehan, R. A. Smith, and C. L. Seibert of New York; Horace Andrews of Cleveland, Ohio, and Seth L. Keeney of Brooklyn.

MEXICAN NATIONAL'S WORK.

Gauge of More Than Half of the Road Has Been Standardized.

The National Railroad of Mexico, which has been engaged on the work of standardizing the gauge of its tracks, announced yesterday that the second section had been successfully opened for business. The length of the road as a standard gauge line from Laredo is now 478 miles, or considerably more than one-half of the entire road.

The standardizing of the tracks from San Luis Potosi, the present southern end of the new track, is now in progress. The rails which are being laid were imported from Europe, and the capacity of the road has been more than doubled. Instead of carrying cars of 40,000 pounds capacity, the new track will stand cars of 80,000 pounds capacity, and one of the big new engines can haul as much as four of the old locomotives could. It is expected that the entire work will be completed during the coming Summer.

Thomas Tait's Australian Position.

Thomas Tait, long the manager of transportation for the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company, was at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. He has accepted the position of Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Victoria State railways in Australia, a system with a mileage of 3,000. He will make his headquarters at Melbourne. Mr. Tait will sail from Vancouver on May 1, and his family will follow in the Fall.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The weather has cleared in the Northeastern part of the country, but continues cloudy in the South and on the Pacific Coast and the Northwest. Rain has again set in along the West Gulf Coast and in Mississippi and Alabama. It is much colder in Montana and the Dakotas; elsewhere high temperatures for the season prevail.

The depression off the Texas Coast probably will move northeasterly during Friday and Saturday, giving rain in the Gulf and South Atlantic States Friday, and in the Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, and the Middle Atlantic States Saturday. Elsewhere generally fair weather will prevail. It will be colder in the Northwest.

The winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be light and variable, becoming southeast Saturday; on the South Atlantic and East Gulf Coast fresh southeast winds will prevail, while on the West Gulf fresh north to northwest winds are probable. On Lake Michigan the winds will be fresh south, becoming northwest.

Steamships departing Friday for European ports will have light west winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

Cold-wave warnings have been issued for Wyoming, Nebraska, Minnesota, Northwestern Iowa and Northeastern Colorado, South Dakota, and Bismarck. Heavy frost warnings have been issued for Western Oregon and Western Washington.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

New England, fair Friday; Saturday fair, except rain in south portion; light variable winds, mostly west.

Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware, fair Friday and Saturday, light, variable winds, mostly west.

District of Columbia and Maryland, fair Friday; Saturday rain, light, variable winds, becoming northeast.

Western New York, cloudy and warmer Friday; Saturday rain, fresh southwest winds.

Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, rain Friday and Saturday; light to fresh northeast winds.

West Virginia, fair Friday; Saturday rain.

Minnesota, snow Friday, much colder in east and central portions; Saturday fair, fresh northwest winds.

North Dakota, fair Friday and Saturday; warmer Saturday.

LOCAL FORECAST—Fair; winds variable, mostly west.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

COMPLETE T[illegible]T SYSTEM [illegible]ROOKLYN

Chief Engineer [illegible]s Report to [illegible] Board.

[illegible] COST [illegible]52,000,000

Facilities for In[illegible] Communication and Wh[illegible]mprovements on Elevated [illegible]o Tunnel to [illegible]

Chief Engineer [illegible] submitted to the Rapid Transit [illegible] yesterday his report on a pro[illegible]lete system of transit for the B[illegible] Brooklyn. As in his recent repor[illegible]hattan and the Bronx, he urge[illegible]struction of new tunnels and man[illegible]ovements in the privately controlled [illegible] railroads. Mayor Low, announcing that he wished to hasten a final disposition of the plans, offered the following resolution:

[illegible] be referred to a special committee of [illegible] which the President of the commission [illegible] Chairman and the Controller one of the [illegible] to confer with the Manhattan Railway Company, the New York Central and Hudson [illegible] Company, and the Brooklyn [illegible] Company, as to the terms and [illegible] upon which any or all of these companies [illegible] agree to make any or all of the extensions [illegible] changes in their systems [illegible] the Chief Engineer, and to report [illegible] this Board at as early a day as practicable.

[illegible] adopted, and at the Mayor's [illegible] the entire plans for all the [illegible] were handed over to the committee.

[illegible] proposals for Brooklyn, involving improvements in connections between [illegible] Borough and Manhattan, were [illegible] concerned with the following:

[illegible] the Brooklyn Bridge to its [illegible]tions, ridding it of all elevated [illegible] and transposing the surface [illegible]ance now occupied by those [illegible] trains.

[illegible] the Brooklyn elevated railroads [illegible] Manhattan approaches of [illegible] and Williamsburg bridges [illegible] new tunnel running from [illegible]lden Lane, this borough; [illegible] tunnel to extend across [illegible] to West Street; the main [illegible] from Malden Lane along [illegible] to Park Row, to Centre [illegible] Street, and under private [illegible] Williamsburg Bridge; a [illegible]ed for junction with the [illegible]; all the work on this [illegible] occupy two years for [illegible] the river section three [illegible]

[illegible] loop, to build a [illegible]asterly along the [illegible]ay, East New York [illegible]

[illegible]p the two Flatbush [illegible] to extend them fur[illegible]oroughfare, with a [illegible]way. [illegible] extension from the [illegible]nt Brooklyn line [illegible] Avenues) south[illegible]enue to Fort Hamil[illegible] it becomes [illegible] point far-out, where [illegible] the shift.

[illegible] still another East River tunnel, [illegible] from the Battery in this borough [illegible] Avenue in Brooklyn, adaptable [illegible] stations with the South Brooklyn [illegible] with the other one out Flat[illegible] connection [illegible] Street line in this [illegible]

CHANGES ON THE ELEVATED.

[illegible] to the above suggestions, the [illegible]ineer proposed wholesale im[illegible] for the elevated lines in Brook[illegible] were as follows:

[illegible] track on the Fulton Street elevated [illegible] of the line at East New York to the [illegible]

[illegible]rd track to the Myrtle Avenue line [illegible]wood to the Brooklyn Bridge.

[illegible] track on the Fifth and Third Ave[illegible] South Brooklyn from Myrtle Avenue [illegible]

[illegible] the Fulton Street elevated between [illegible]lace and Alabama Avenue and the [illegible]ank Road. This will permit Jamaica [illegible]pass down either Fulton Street or [illegible] and avoid running through the loop [illegible]sequent congestion.

[illegible]e Fulton Street line and the Fifth [illegible] to provide for the latter a better [illegible]nment and to serve the local [illegible]rict in Brooklyn.

[illegible] a new elevated railway from the [illegible] the Brighton Beach Railroad con[illegible] Along Flatbush [illegible] Avenue, to Gwinnett Street, [illegible] Street, to Manhattan Avenue, to [illegible] Jackson Avenues in Long Island [illegible] Bridge, with an [illegible] through Jackson Avenue to Debevoise [illegible] Bay, and also a spur from [illegible] Montrose Avenue to South [illegible] the Williamsburg Bridge. This [illegible] through an extensive portion of the [illegible] and bring it in touch with [illegible] and financial districts in Man[illegible] retail district in Brooklyn.

[illegible] Street elevated, from its [illegible] Street through Fulton [illegible]ico, private property, and [illegible] the Jamaica Plank Road. [illegible] a direct connection to [illegible] east of the terminus of the [illegible] and west of Jamaica.

[illegible] Transit Company is now [illegible] of inclines to make a loop [illegible] and Fifth Avenue elevated [illegible] Hamilton, which will very ma[illegible] the facilities at that point. It [illegible]

[illegible] cost of these improvements, ex[illegible] abutial damages, is about $52,000,000, [illegible] about $31,000,000 represents the apprai[illegible] cost of extending the subway and [illegible] the second tunnel with its Con[illegible] connection in Manhattan. the increased load were branded as makeshifts, for the bridge was not capable, he said, of such reconstruction.

In outlining the plan for a tunnel connecting the Brooklyn elevated roads with the Manhattan terminals of the Williamsburg and Manhattan Bridges, Mr. Parsons said that the tunnel ought to have two tracks everywhere, with four along that portion under Centre Street, the stations on the line to be at William Street, Fulton Street, Brooklyn Bridge, Worth Street, Canal Street, and Grand Street, and on the Cortlandt Street branch at Church and West Streets. He continued:

As the delays due to cross switching at the terminal would be done away with, more elevated trains and longer ones could be run through the tunnel than on the present bridge, and by providing the above-named stations, or others equally convenient, Brooklyn travelers would be delivered at six stations instead of at one, as at present, and be distributed along the whole length of the east side of the commercial district in through trains at a single fare. (also at two stations on the west side.) For such passengers as desire to go to points north of Delancey Street one or other of the two lines connects with every transportation line in Manhattan. The gradients in the tunnel are distinctly less than those on the Brooklyn Bridge. This plan proposes circulation of movement between the two new bridges and the proposed tunnel.

The whole of the tunnel and subway from the Brooklyn approach to the Manhattan Bridge under the East River and connecting with the Manhattan termini of the Williamsburg and Manhattan Bridges, could be constructed under the conditions of municipal ownership, as provided in the rapid transit act, and similar to those in force on the subway and tunnel now being built in Brooklyn.

Should the above-described plan be carried out, the Borough of Brooklyn will then be connected with the Borough of Manhattan by three bridges carrying six elevated tracks and ten surface tracks, and two tunnels carrying four tracks, every one of which tracks will have a greater carrying capacity than either one of the two elevated or two surface tracks on the existing bridge. These increased facilities of transbuvial transit will in themselves provide the greatest single measure of relief that Brooklyn stands in need of; there remains, therefore, but to propose and to carry into execution as rapidly as possible certain extensions of the rapid transit facilities in Brooklyn, which will be rendered possible by the increase in the terminal facilities in Manhattan. These extensions should obviously be of two characters—one, the extension of the subway system wherever such extensions can be made economically, and become an integral part of the railway system which the city has already begun; the other, extensions on such terms as the board may determine of the elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in order that such company may more properly fulfill its obligations. The first of these extensions will obviously require time; the second, however, can be more quickly executed, and consequently is the one to furnish immediate relief.

MANHATTAN TRANSIT PLAN.

Ex-Senator Ford at Public Hearing Urges the Abolition of Elevated Roads—The Up-Town Tunnel.

A second public hearing on Chief Engineer Parsons's transit scheme for Manhattan and the Bronx was held yesterday afternoon before the Rapid Transit Commission at 320 Broadway.

Ex-Senator John Ford, author of the Ford Franchise Tax bill, took occasion to make a speech in which he said the commission ought not to adopt plans for improving elevated railroads, but should adopt the policy of ridding the city of such roads altogether. He said both elevated roads and surface tracks ought to be abandoned, ultimately, in the down-town district, leaving the streets entirely free for trucks, other vehicles, and pedestrians.

"Don't give the elevated a longer lease on life," he said. "The elevated ought to be made to put its tracks under the surface, at least down town. Its franchise will expire before the term of the first subway contract has elapsed, and the city has power to make it depress its road. I think power should be given to the commission to make such arrangements."

After he had commended the Parsons plan for the north of the city, the ex-Senator said he saw no reason why the city should pay for building any future lines. He explained that under the present arrangement the city might give the underground syndicate a contract for $25,000,000, and in forty-six years the interest paid on the bonds by the contractor would refund the whole sum.

"The city," he said, "ought not to admit that it is in the hands of one syndicate. We can get better terms than we did, and there is no reason for seventy-five-year leases any longer. If you pursue the policy of letting out future contracts to the highest bidder, you ought not to plan additional tunnels so that they cannot be operated independently. All you plan should be such tunnels as can be operated profitably without connection with existing lines, and then independent bidders will have as good a chance as anybody."

After attacking the Metropolitan Street Railway, saying it made no effort to give seats to its passengers, even outside of rush hours, Mr. Ford declared that the laws now on the books to govern the elevated roads of this city contained as adequate provisions for protecting the public as were embodied in the McDonald contract for the Manhattan-Bronx subway.

"Those provisions are no more binding," he said, "than the charter of the Manhattan Elevated Company is binding on it. The question is the enforcement of the law. It doesn't do any good to have it unless it is enforced. The elevated deliberately does not obey. How do we know others will obey, no matter what is in their contracts?"

David Einstein, representing many merchants of the dry goods district, appeared with a petition signed by hundreds of names. He made his plea against the proposed tunnel down Wooster and Church Streets, with its terminals at Broadway and Forty-second Street and at the Battery. West Broadway, he urged, was much better for the new line than Wooster and Church Streets.

Isaac Boehm, Vice President of the Borough Realty Company, argued in behalf of the Lexington Avenue tunnel.

"It will be much more serviceable there than if built further east," he said. "The people who live east of Third Avenue have plenty of facilities. I myself, for instance, living near Madison Avenue, have to walk about half a mile to get to an elevated station."

Mr. Boehm's remarks were in reply to the petitions that First Avenue ought to be used for the east side line. In support of the latter plan many men appeared at the first hearing, and Mr. Wickersham was there again this time, arguing that Lexington Avenue was too narrow, and that a line under it was merely in the interest of the New York Central Railroad.

THE CITY'S TRANSPORTATION.

Mr. Vreeland Says More Passengers Are Carried Locally Than on All the Country's Steam Railroads.

Herbert H. Vreeland, President of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, delivered the fifth address of the series of Winter lectures before the Men's Club of the Judson Memorial, 53 Washington Square South, last night, his subject being "Transit Facilities in New York."

In telling of the difficulties of the transportation problem in New York, and especially on Manhattan Island, where within a limited few hours at different periods of the day, all the travel is in one direction, he gave statistics of the results accomplished by the surface railways of New York as compared with the steam roads of the United States and said that whereas all the steam roads of the country in the last year had transported 610,000,000 passengers, the local transportation of New York City had been 700,000,000. Of this number he said the surface and elevated railways had transported 620,000,000, or about 10,000,000 more than all the steam railroads of the country in the same space of time.

Of the cost of the work he said the Metropolitan Railway Company since he had been connected with it had expended more than $70,000,000 on construction and improvement and had brought its equipment up to the highest modern standard of service and convenience, though there still were registered nearly as many complaints from passengers as in the old days of horse power and inferior service. On this subject Mr. Vreeland said that if all the complaints and demands for the discharge of employes were acted on, the road would change its entire force of employes every year.

Of the complaint that the surface railway cars are slow, he said that it was not the province of the surface railway to supply rapid transit, and that the moment the attempt was made the surface road would have entered a field that did not belong to it. Rapid transit, he asserted, was a matter for the underground lines and the elevated roads, and the surface lines, intended for the transportation of the block-to-block travel, had nothing to do with it.

Of the actual speed of the surface lines of the present day, he declared that in spite of the electric power used, conditions were such that the cars are slower than were the old horse cars, an average speed of eight miles an hour being the limit attainable.

TROLLEY MERGER STEP.

New Jersey Directors Refer the Proposed Nevins Syndicate Proposition to a Committee.

The preliminary step toward the merging of the North Jersey Street Railway Company, the Jersey City, Hoboken and Paterson Railway Company, the Orange and Passaic Valley Railway Company, and the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Railway Company was taken at the offices of the North Jersey Company in Jersey City yesterday, when the Directors of the companies first named met severally and afterward jointly to consider a proposition submitted by Thomas A. Nevins, who is a Director of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Railway Company.

The sessions were held behind closed doors, but when the final meeting adjourned a statement was given out by E. F. C. Young, President of the North Jersey and also President of the First National Bank of Jersey City. This statement was as follows:

"Mr. E. F. C. Young, in reply to an inquiry with reference to recent publications regarding the proposed lease of street railways, stated that at a meeting to-day of the boards of the several companies a committee, consisting of E. F. C. Young, President of the First National Bank of Jersey City; John D. Crimmins, Vice President of the City Trust Company of New York; A. J. Cassatt, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Randal Morgan, Vice President of the United Gas Improvement Company; John I. Waterbury, President of the Manhattan Trust Company, New York, and Thomas N. McCarter, Vice President of the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, were appointed to consider the propositions submitted and report thereon in due course."

From other sources it was learned that Mr. Nevins, the promoter of the merger, proposes to unite all the companies under the management of a new corporation, to be known as the United New Jersey Railways Company, leases of the existing roads to be taken for 999 years. The new company will be capitalized at $20,000,000, and it will pay all operating and other charges of the leased companies, including all repairs and extensions necessary to bring the roads to a high state of efficiency.

The new company is also to place $4,000,000 in the hands of a trustee as a guarantee of its performance of the conditions. This fund may be invested in the bonds of the leased companies or in any other safe securities. No dividends are to be paid until July 1, 1904, when a dividend of 1½ per cent. shall be paid. After that there is to be a fractional increase yearly until 1912, when the maximum will be reached. This will be 4 per cent. to the North Jersey and 3 per cent. to the other lines.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY MAKES NO METROPOLITAN STATEMENT.

Mr. Jerome Says He Does Not Question Motives of Complainants Who Furnish Evidence with Charges.

Metropolitan Street Railway stock dropped 1½ points on the market yesterday, after having gained 1¾ on the day previous, just after the publication of the statement that District Attorney Jerome was investigating alleged illegalities in the company's financial affairs.

The District Attorney announced yesterday morning that he was preparing a formal document containing his views on the charges and the matter in general. Late in the afternoon, when the score of newspaper men invaded his office in accordance with the daily custom, Mr. Jerome said:

"I had intended to give out a statement, but I shall not do so to-night."

He explained that the statement had been prepared, but then he engaged in a telephone conversation with counsel for the Metropolitan system. As a result of that conversation he discovered that he had not understood properly what he had thought was an understanding between himself and the company's lawyers. What that understanding was he declined to say.

"I thought we agreed on the matter," he added, "but over the telephone I have learned that there is some doubt as to whether we understood each other. Until the doubt is cleared up I cannot say anything about the matter."

De Lancey Nicoll, one of the company's lawyers, had nothing to say. He was asked if the company was preparing to prosecute those whom it charges with having published the fraud allegations. There was nothing to say about this, nor was anything to be learned as to whether the company had agreed to open its books to the District Attorney for inspection.

Stephen Little, the expert accountant who examined the books and said that the company's accounts were all right, was put in his office at 100 Broadway when a reporter called yesterday. A business associate in the office said:

"You need not ask Mr. Little for any information. All he has to say is given out through Mr. Vreeland."

Mr. Little's original statement, issued by the Metropolitan officials, was a contradiction of the deductions reached by Messrs. Hertle and Teichmann, the accountants employed by unknown parties to ferret out wrong in the Metropolitan's reports to the State Railroad Commission.

William N. Amory, whom President Vreeland charged with stock-jobbing motives in instigating published accusations against the company, issued a formal denial of Mr. Vreeland's assertions. He said he was not discharged from the employ of the Third Avenue Railroad Company, as Mr. Vreeland stated, but resigned voluntarily. Nor had he stirred up charges against the Metropolitan for stock-jobbing purposes.

District Attorney Jerome, in response to questions, said just before he left his office:

"I do not consider motives of people who come to this office to make complaints. It is not a question for us to deal with as to the underlying causes which bring people here to make charges, so long as they have the evidence of the commission of crime. As long as they have that, I must take it for granted that they come on account of moral obligations as citizens."

WANTED ST. BERNARD KILLED.

Residents of the Block Gave Rover a Bad Record—His Owner Fined.

Residents of the block in One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, between Seventh and Lenox Avenues, came to the Harlem Court in force yesterday morning to demand the life of Rover, a big St. Bernard dog, who, according to their description, is the terror of all pet owners of the neighborhood. William C. Dodge of 261 West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, Rover's owner, was in court to defend the animal, and with him came two witnesses who swore that the brute was kind and gentle.

Bernard McGuire, Mr. Dodge's neighbor at No. 247, was Rover's first accuser. He said that on Wednesday he was passing Mr. Dodge's house with his little terrier, Skye, which was given to him two years ago by Richard Croker, and which he valued at $300, in his arms.

"I put my little dog on the sidewalk for a moment," he said, "when the St. Bernard suddenly jumped from Mr. Dodge's stoop and crushed my terrier's head with a single bite, killing him instantly. It was the most vicious thing I ever saw."

Mr. McGuire then presented a petition signed by a score of dwellers in the block, asking that Rover be killed.

Mrs. Caroline B. James of No. 250, then said that three days before Rover had chewed her pet poodle into insensibility. Lawrence Voorhis of No. 217 said that a few days ago he was passing the Dodge house with his sixty-pound bulldog when Rover attacked the animal.

"When I tried to separate them, Mr. Dodge said, 'Let them fight it out,'" said Mr. Voorhis. "Mr. Dodge is bigger than I am, and I had to stand by and see my dog get a terrific licking. He was nearly killed."

Mr. Dodge protested that Mr. McGuire's terrier had annoyed Rover while he was asleep on his steps, and that the big dog's jaws had accidentally closed on the little one's head.

Magistrate Cornell told him he had no business to keep such a dangerous animal in the city.

"I have nine dogs," he continued, "but I don't keep any of them in the city. You had better send your dog away. I will fine you $10 for keeping this vicious brute, and I advise Mr. McGuire that he has a very good cause for a civil suit against you for the loss of his terrier."

SALE IN TEIXEIRA HOUSE

Residence Used as a Place to Sell Artistic Furnishings.

Auctioneer Admits Don Eugenio Faria Goanzales de Teixeira Never Saw at Least Part of the Collections.

The second of the six days' "sale extraordinary," in which "the magnificent house and its furnishings, 913 West End Avenue, corner of One Hundred and Fifth Street, formerly occupied by Don Eugenio Faria Goanzales de Teixeira, Marquis of Aguila Branca, a member of one of the foremost families in Brazil," are being disposed of at public auction, was held yesterday.

In the day's sale the remaining 235 of the 307 articles which went to make up the "furnishings" of the front and back "boudoirs" on the third floor were disposed of, together with 113 of the 360 that comprised the contents of the "Turkish" room, an apartment on the ground floor about 10 by 12 feet in size. To-day the balance of the "furnishings" of the "Turkish" room will be sold and a small start made on the "music" room, which will be finished the following day, so that some little inroad may be made before Sunday upon the 835 articles having to do, directly or indirectly, with the dining room.

This all does not mean, of course, that Don Eugenio Faria de Teixeira, Marquis of Aguila Branca, stocked his house, in the course of his unfortunate existence in New York, with all these things, which, taken together, constitute some small part of the 2,388 articles catalogued in the sale.

If one asks the auctioneer he will be told that the pretense of the sale is simply to offer an opportunity unparalleled to obtain rare and costly articles which have been "collected," by whom he does not say, but certainly not by Teixeira. The only thing in the entire auction which, it is claimed, was "collected" by Don Eugenio Faria de Teixeira, is the house itself, which bears on its four corners and in other places evidences of his fantastic tastes in the shape of hanging beacons with electric globes shining through colored glass.

A reporter yesterday asked Benjamin S. Wise of 19 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, who is conducting the sale, if the things sold were supposed to have belonged to Don Eugenio de Teixeira.

"Not at all," replied Mr. Wise. "We only say in our advertisements and catalogue that the house which Teixeira occupied, and its contents will be sold. The contents are collections made in different places."

"You do not pretend, then, that Mr. Teixeira had anything to do with these 'collections'?"

"No. Some of the articles may have been his, but certainly all were not."

"Then you are merely using this house, which is to be sold at auction, as a place for holding this general sale of goods?"

"That's about the size of it."

Teixeira was quite a collector of houses during his New York career, although this one in which he made his home is the only one about to be sacrificed to the public at auction. Within the great door, if one looks up, he will see himself reflected in the French plate mirrors of the low ceiling. The "music room," according to the catalogue, bears on its walls, although well covered up just now by between nineteen and twenty-seven pictures, strange frescoes, the like of which had not been seen until de Teixeira made them. A reception room on the other side of the door is illuminated by a score of incandescent globes half concealed in a double ceiling, and the "Turkish" den beyond, the only comfortable looking place that has thus far met the eye, is hung with fantastic draperies.

In the second floor and floors above the rooms, while evidently rather garish in taste in their original decorations, are more like the abodes of civilization, except for amateurish carvings of coats of arms complicated with heraldic devices. At present, however, most of these coats of arms are concealed by pictures. What space is spared from the pictures is taken up with pottery.

AUNTIE VAN DYKE'S MEMORY.

She Remembers Having Seen Washington, but Was Never Patted on the Head by Lafayette.

"Auntie" Van Dyke, who, it is claimed, is one hundred and twelve years old, celebrated the anniversary of her birth yesterday afternoon at the Lincoln Mission, 1,690 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn. The centenarian, who still retains all her faculties, received her friends at the mission and was the recipient of flowers and other gifts from them.

The aged woman has been called "Auntie" for so long a time that her Christian name seems to have been quite forgotten. She makes her home at 1,810 Atlantic Avenue with Mrs. Sarah Brown, with whom she has lived since 1875. "Auntie," it is declared, was born a slave and was the property of Daniel Cortelyou, who was a farmer in New Utrecht.

"She does not know her own age," said Mrs. Brown yesterday, speaking of "Auntie." "I learned, however, from an old book belonging to the Cortelyou family that she was born in 1791. According to that, she is one hundred and twelve years old."

In line with most other centenarians, "Auntie" remembers seeing George Washington. Strange as it may seem, however, she was never patted on the head by Lafayette.

"Oh, yes, I remember Mr. Washington," she said yesterday. "He used to come down on horseback to see my old master. There was another man come sometimes who was a Captain and had a regiment. My master was a farmer, and I was sold to him by his sister. I had eight children. All were born in slavery and most of them died in slavery."

"Auntie," according to the statement of her age given by Mrs. Brown, must have been only eight years old when Washington died, and the fact that she can recall seeing at this tender age the Father of His Country riding down to the old farm in New Utrecht is regarded by some of her friends as showing that her memory has not yet grown very weak.

OBJECTED TO DEATH SHIP.

Special Gang of Stevedores Had to be Found to Unload Karamania's Cargo.

As a rule stevedores tumble over each other in their anxiety to secure work on a ship, but yesterday they tumbled over one another in their great haste to give the cargo on the death ship, the Karamania, as wide a berth as possible. They feared to enter its hold and cared not who knew it.

The boss stevedore blew his whistle until he wearied thereof. Then he threatened and stormed, but the laborers edged further and further away. In all South Brooklyn there was nothing the laborers feared so much as the Karamania. The gangs of men stood afar off, and pretended not to hear the calls of the boss stevedore.

After some hours were lost a half dozen volunteered, with the proviso that they be allowed to dicker for extra compensation. Then an order was given to search for men who were not so easily alarmed. In time sixty were obtained. The cargo of wine, cheese, ivory, and olive oil was attacked under the direct eye of a health officer. Only the workers and he were allowed on board.

The Karamania may not sail Saturday as booked. Health Officer Doty came from Hoffman Island at 2:30 P. M. "Conditions there are altogether satisfactory," he said.

Dr. L'Hommedieu, Deputy Health Officer, made an examination of the passengers and crew, and reported no signs of approaching illness.

Dr. Doty declared he made the only decision he could two days ago. He further said:

"I wish to reiterate what I said in the first instance—that I have not specifically declared the cause of death as cholera. I have said that in the absence of cases on arrival it was impossible to make a diagnosis. I could not accept the meagre reports of the ship's surgeon and the surgeon detailed by the Italian Government as showing any other than suspicious indications. I considered the history as given suspicious enough to warrant me in placing the exposed persons under quarantine until all possibility of danger had passed.

IRON WORKERS' DEMANDS.

They Want 56 1-4 Cents an Hour Here and 50 Cents Elsewhere—American Bridge Official.

Demands on behalf of most of the local unions of structural iron workers throughout the United States for a new agreement, to go into effect May 1, were in the hands of the manufacturers and contractors yesterday, and will be acted on within a week or two by the employers. With the exception of this city it was said the wages demanded all over the country will be for a uniform rate of 50 cents an hour. In Cleveland the wages are 35 cents an hour, and in other cities they range all the way up to 50 cents an hour.

The structural iron manufacturers, it was learned yesterday, are likely to agree to a demand for 50 cents an hour in the principal cities, but have set that figure as the limit. In New York the wages demanded on May 1 are 56¼ cents an hour, or $4.50 a day for a working day of eight hours, and if strikes of structural iron workers take place to enforce the demands New York will be the storm centre.

J. W. Johnson, Secretary-Treasurer of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Association, is now in this city, and will make New York his headquarters until after May 1 at least. He admitted yesterday that a proposed new agreement was now in the hands of the iron manufacturers and contractors on behalf of the Housesmiths, Bridgemen and Structural Workers' Union of New York, which embodied a demand for an increase of wages from $4 to $4.50 a day.

"As to a uniform rate of wages," he said, "that would be all right in cities outside of New York. But in New York the standard of living is higher than any other city in the United States, and the wages have to be higher. It costs more to live in New York than in any other city."

He said that the demands had simply been sent to the different contractors. The unions would wait until a week or two before May 1 to hear from the employers. Then, if they were refused, strikes would follow.

A representative of the American Bridge Company said yesterday that he believed the structural iron manufacturers, who have recently formed a National association, would not make a fight against a uniform wage scale of 50 cents an hour. It would, however, resist any demand for higher wages than 50 cents.

"As to this company," he said, "we do not object to meeting committees of the union, even if all the members of the committees are not our own employes, if they want to discuss matters. I have no objection to unions, but when a union, as the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union, has done fixed its initiation fee at $100 to restrict its membership and then insists that we only employ union men, it is carrying matters too far. Many times the union could not furnish us with enough men, and we have had to employ non-union men. We told the delegates of this, and they admitted it. An initiation fee of $100 is prohibitive to many competent workingmen."

Unions Stop Work on Chicago Bridges.

CHICAGO, March 12.—The strike of structural iron workers against the American Bridge Company, which was started in the East, has extended to the company's contracts here, and work on two bridges under construction for the city was stopped to-day.

SPECULATOR'S SPECIAL PLEA.

Disclaims Losses on Margin Account as Gambling Debts, and Says Agreement is Void.

In an action filed in the County Clerk's Office in Brooklyn yesterday, the defendant, in a suit for broker's fees claimed freedom from liability as from an ordinary gambling debt. The action was brought by Samuel T. Welch, Henry Dixon, Alfred R. Thomas, and J. Andrews Harris, composing the firm of Ervine & Co., stock brokers, of Philadelphia, against Edward V. Douglass of that city.

In the complaint it was alleged that Douglass had entered into an agreement with Ervine & Co., by which he purchased through them on margin, 1,000 shares of Consolidated Lake Superior Company stock, preferred, and 1,000 shares of the common stock, valued at $102,000 and that he deposited with them $20,000. In case the stock decreased in value he was to pay the losses. He became indebted to Ervine & Co. for $28,979.30, it was alleged, and the firm obtained an attachment against his property.

In his answer, Mr. Douglass admitted that he made the contract and paid $20,000 and declared that in addition he paid to the plaintiffs on Oct. 14, 1902, $3,000 and on Dec. 11, 1902, $1,500. He declared that the agreement was one of hazard and consequently void because it was contrary to public policy and the statutes of the State. Therefore he asked that the attach PROOFS OF PROSPERITY.

Our exports of domestic products for the month of February show an increase of $20,206,966, as compared with February of last year. In cotton alone there was an increase of $12,654,505, and breadstuffs increased $5,885,256. In cattle and hogs, in meat and dairy products and mineral oils, an increase is also reported.

For the eight months beginning July 1 and ending March 1 our exports are still $18,172,749 below the record of the corresponding months a year ago. But if the record of the current month is as favorable as that of February, the showing will be reversed and a gain recorded for the fiscal year up to April 1. The higher price of cotton is, of course, reflected in the extraordinary gain in the export of that staple.

The iron output for the week of March 7, as reported by The Iron Age, shows an increase of 12,222 tons over the week of Feb. 1. The gain over March 1, 1902, is 24,623 tons. The week of March 1 establishes a new high record, 355,333 gross tons. The previous high record was the week of May 1 of last year. The number of furnaces in operation and their output is the best-known measure of business activity.

There is comfort in these figures for the despondent. If men will only raise their eyes from the ticker and look about them they will cease to indulge in gloomy forecasts of the country's business. Two gentlemen in Wall Street may quarrel over a railroad. Persons affected with a bearish interest may attack corporations and institute strike proceedings in the courts. But the country marches unimpeded along the highroad of prosperity.

DEFEAT BY POSTPONEMENT.

If the House of Representatives were in session and favorably disposed to the treaty with Cuba the amendment accepted in the Senate yesterday providing that the treaty shall not take effect until "approved by the Congress" would be of little importance. As a matter of fact, most treaties sooner or later involve expenditure, and as the House holds the purse-strings its consent is essential to their going into full effect. In the case of a reciprocity treaty the House by its initiative in respect to revenue laws is in a position to give or to withhold its assent to the conventions agreed to by the treaty-making power. But by accepting this amendment to the Cuban treaty the Senate voluntarily divests itself of the power to ratify. Even should the treaty be approved by a two-thirds vote, it would not be a ratified treaty. It must wait till the House assembles in December, and after this exhibition of what may be properly called double-dealing in a Senate controlled by Republican protectionists it is altogether unsafe to jump at conclusions concerning the action of a Republican House.

The supporters of the treaty have fought and run away, but they cannot claim that they will live to fight another day. The fight is now transferred to the House, where they have no standing as combatants. It is hardly going too far to say that the treaty is for the time being defeated. It is certainly cheated of its purpose, which was to afford immediate relief to commerce between the United States and Cuba, now hindered and hampered by exorbitant customs taxes. The Senate of Cuba has ratified the treaty, and the news of its ratification was received with joy and enthusiasm throughout the island. It is a measure of relief for Cuban planters, it opens wide to them the door of prosperity. It gives them access to our markets on better terms than their European competitors, and by its reciprocal features enables them to supply themselves at lower prices with products imported from this country. It is a relief that we have repeatedly promised them that we are under moral obligations to give. With great fortitude they have thus far borne the injustice involved in one year's postponement of the treaty. Now the Senate heartlessly puts them off for another year, and there is no assurance that even then the treaty will be finally ratified and go into effect. If the beet sugar interests and the other protected interests, having secured a postponement from the Senate, continue with determination their obstructive work, who can say what they may not accomplish in the House next Winter?

It is a shameful chapter of pure selfishness and greed, and not the least shameful part of it is the stupid course of the Democrats. The Senators from the sugar-producing States of the South may be excused for their devotion to local interest and opinion. But the Democratic Senators as a whole should have been moved by every consideration of party interest to support the treaty and compel its Republican opponents to fight it "in the open." If this is one of the fruits of Mr. GORMAN's leadership, it may be said at once that it in no wise enhances his reputation. But the shame of the postponement falls upon neither party alone, it belongs to the country. The Senate has made it hard for an American citizen to look a Cuban in the face.

TREES ON HIGHWAYS.

The bill to encourage the planting of trees on highways of the State, which was introduced to the Senate at Albany by Mr. MCCLELLAND early last month, is also a bill to prevent the wanton destruction of trees on our public roads. A similar bill was introduced to the Assembly by Mr. WAINWRIGHT. The latter has been referred back to the Committee on Internal Affairs, where it will be discussed next Tuesday—or smothered!

Protection of highway trees is needed against the axes of anybody and everybody who at present seem able to dispose of shade trees at their own sweet will, because not actually within the fence lines of adjacent property, and sometimes against the property owners themselves, who have an idea that they own to the middle of the road. The worst offenders, however, because systematic and lawless in their proceedings, are the telephone, steam, and trolley lines. These gentry should be brought up with a round turn, and where they destroy or mutilate public property they should be forced to pay damages.

Not content with having the use of the highways and the "right of way," as the motormen, for instance, calmly claim when they run down a President of the United States whose carriage dares to cross their tracks, they fell, cut, and slash trees as if we were still in Colonial days, with more firewood and fencing material than we know what to do with. Already the steam railways are said to have arranged an amendment which is to take all the force from the bill and make it useless so far as giving real protection to the people is concerned, and it is plain that the same wires which were pulled last year to entrap the bill introduced by Mr. HENNESSEY are laid in secret to do the new bill to death. It remains to be seen whether the Legislature will permit this important measure for the public good to be strangled for the temporary benefit of selfish interests.

All who love good roads as pleasant ways on which to walk or drive, all who realise that shade trees, like good roadbeds, build up a countryside, add to the wealth of the farmers, and increase the value of property, and all who appreciate the value of keeping trees in plenty because they regulate the rainfall should make their influence felt at Albany in order to head off the steam and electric interests in their underhand moves against the public weal. They are worse than the gypsy moth and the elm-tree beetle, for in their crass stupidity they ruin the trees outright, apparently unaware that by so doing they harm their own future, but perhaps indifferent to the future so long as they can economize now by looting public goods. Those who drive in Westchester and other suburbs are particularly urged to fight these lines, because their destructiveness is greater near a large city than elsewhere, and it is just the country near cities which should be most protected, because there the greatest number of citizens and owners of real estate will suffer. This bill is permissive in that it allows Commissioners of Highways to issue permits to property owners to locate and plant trees on highways adjoining their land; it is protective in that it declares unlawful to remove, cut down, girdle, mutilate, injure, or disfigure such shade trees without permission of the Commissioners and without opportunity being given to such property owners as are interested to be heard.

The bill is one that is perfectly fair and can be obstructed only by those who are striving to evade proper responsibilities. If it fails again in this moderate form the persons who have killed it should be brought into the open.

SHIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT.

Is the twentieth century to see a new development of the sailing ship, as the nineteenth saw its waning? Certain things point that way, although the greatest of all steamers has hardly completed her maiden trip. Both in Germany and in this country new large iron and steel sailing vessels, often with auxiliary engines for hoisting sail, or even to give steerage way in port, are beginning to offer serious competition for heavy freight. They are slower and less to be depended on than steamers, but they can be propelled more cheaply, and with the cost of coal rising this difference grows more important.

This competition of sailing vessels has little direct bearing on passengers and fast freight, for the uncertainty of wind is too great, but every fall in interest rates adds to the classes of goods on which time is a minor consideration and diminishes the comparative advantage of the steamer. With the great increase in capital in the world, and especially with the huge amounts of gold now being produced, interest rates will probably continue to fall, as for a century they have been falling notwithstanding great occasional disturbances. In case there is no great destruction of wealth by wars, it seems not impossible that in twenty years 2 per cent. or even less may become the ruling rate on good security. Great borrowers are preparing for this by reserving in their bond issues the right to redeem, generally after ten years, at a considerable premium in case rates fall to a point where such conversion would be profitable.

But any considerable fall in interest rates will have a secondary effect on the transportation problem greatly outweighing interest on the cost of goods in transit. This lies in its influence on the price of coal. Of course coal tends to rise in value as the fields are exhausted, but with present interest rates this increase is so slow as to be negligible. At 5 per cent. compound interest money doubles in about fourteen years. Few expect the price of unmined coal to double in that time, so at present there is a rush to market it as quickly as possible. But at 2 per cent. money only doubles in about thirty-four years, and with any approach to this rate it might be more profitable to wait for higher prices. Every fall in interest will have more or less effect in raising the price of all products of which the total supply is decreasing if the demand is constant.

This will have its effect even on the passenger trade. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse burns 4,000 tons of coal in crossing the ocean once, and the Deutschland is so much more voracious that she can carry only 700 tons of freight besides the mails and passengers. This burden is becoming too grievous to be borne with the increasing cost of coal, and unless more economical engines can be devised the cost for high speeds will become prohibitory. The turbine engine offers a possibility of improvement, but so far these have been built only on a small scale, and even so cannot compete in economy with recent explosion engines, burning either oil or gas. These are already in successful operation on shore in sizes up to 1,500 horse power for a single engine, and are said to be able to run on 0.75 pound of coal in the form of gas per horse power per hour, while the best that can be done with quadruple expansion engines is about 1.50 pounds, and the ordinary tramp steamer uses nearer 4 pounds. A new gas engine recently put on the market claims to get as low as 0.60 pound, and it seems as if the immensely greater economy of this form of power must soon displace the present type of engine everywhere on the ocean, though so far naphtha launches seem to be the only marine adaptation of this principle, and as if the future competition would be between such engines and sail power with auxiliary engines.

The steel sailing vessel is an accomplished fact, and we shall probably see a wider employment of wind power for heavy freight over the parts of the ocean where wind abounds, and this is likely to remain an important factor, if interest rates decline, for many years, even if the explosion engine is developed at once for rapid service.

"A NOTORIOUS CHARACTER."

Mr. VREELAND of the Metropolitan Railway Company has publicly described Mr. WILLIAM N. AMORY, sometime of the Third Avenue Railway Company, as a "notorious character." Mr. AMORY rejoins by denying that he is a notorious character, and defying Mr. VREELAND to prove it. We have no expectation that the person whom Mr. AMORY might call "one" VREELAND will take up this challenge from the person whom Mr. VREELAND has actually called "one" AMORY. It is, however, interesting to consider whether one (1) AMORY has any legal redress against one (1) VREELAND, either for the adjective or for the numeral.

Without doubt, both designations were intended to be contemptuous. The Century Dictionary says of "notorious": "When used attributively, the word now commonly implies some circumstance of disadvantage or discredit." But this is not necessarily the case. There are persons hidden in spite of themselves whom it would delight to have themselves spoken of in print as notorious, even though, and even because, the imputation, if it be an imputation, was so inapplicable. But we are not prepared to admit that "notorious" is necessarily a defamatory epithet, nor does our lexicographical authority say so. Without question, a "difficulty" might "lie" in Columbia, S. C., if one Columbian chose to resent the epithet, as it might about any other word, though colorless or even laudatory in itself, from which he might conceive offense. But surely DANIEL O'CONNELL's fishwife, who burst into tears upon being called a "parallelopiped," could not have maintained an action for the misapplication to her of that term. And the question is not whether a difficulty would lie in Columbia, but whether a lawsuit would lie in New York upon the ground that one (1) VREELAND had done so about one (1) AMORY. Of course, the burden of proof of AMORY's notoriety would lie upon VREELAND. AMORY could not be expected to prove his non-notoriety. But AMORY would be compelled to show his injury, while VREELAND would have no difficulty in showing that AMORY had been connected with events of common (or preferred) notoriety. Upon the whole we are inclined to believe that Mr. VREELAND adopted his phrase "a notorious character" under sound legal advice.

Not that he "gave out" his statement under sound literary advice. For it is true, and could be shown in court, that in the same sentence in which he imputed notoriety to AMORY he quite broke the force of that imputation by an incompatible imputation. "One AMORY, a notorious character," will not do at all. It is true that both "one" and "a notorious character" are offensive and contemptuous expressions, and were doubtless intended so to be "in this connection." But there is no connection. There is only a contradiction. To call a man "one" is to defame him by intimating that he is obscure. It marks him for identification. The connotation of "one" is "a man I never heard of." Now, evidently a man of whom Mr. VREELAND never heard, and of whom he intimates that nobody else ever heard, cannot at the same time be "a notorious character." Mr. VREELAND's trip defamations devour each other and leave AMORY in the keen sunlight of publicity at the bottom of a dark cellar.

Thus we see that, even in our angriest moments, we should not permit our disrespect for the man who has provoked us to destroy our respect for the English language.

THE REGENTS.

Bishop DOANE, in a letter to The Tribune, puts the argument for the Regents' Educational Unification bill briefly and convincingly:

Which is wiser, to put the entire public education of the State into a department liable to perpetual changes of methods, dependent upon the varieties of political power and the individual preferences of changing Superintendents, with the inevitable tendency to adapt itself, not to the best methods of education, but the wishes and interests of party, leaving to the Regents only the care of the academies and colleges, of the State Library, and of the museum, or to unify the entire educational system of the State under the constitutional body, whose one and only aim has been and must be to perfect it at every point?

A legislator animated by a sincere regard for the welfare of the State's educational system would admit the force of this reasoning. A legislator who gives his first thought to the welfare of party, who sees great possibilities of political power in the control of the schools, would disregard the Bishop's argument and give his support to the Brown bill, which aims to strip the Regents of their authority and their usefulness.

The fight against the Regents has been long and bitter. If the change is once made, if the Department of Public Instruction is made a bureau of the Board of Regents, if the schools are once taken out of politics, it is safe to say that the policy thus adopted would not be reversed. The politicians feel that it is now or never with them. The very activity and earnestness with which they make the contest shows how high a value they set upon political control of the schools. It is time to end the fight, time to vest the full authority over the schools in the hands of the constitutional body created for its exercise. The enactment of the Regents' bill would accomplish these objects.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—When the American sanitarians, military and other, began the work of cleaning up the Cuban cities, they found that they had before them the task of removing the accumulated filth of centuries, and their various reports, as the work progressed, made revelations as to the long-established habits of the Cubans that astonished the world and filled the Cubans themselves with resentful humiliation. Now that an epidemic has done for Ithaca what a war did for Havana and Santiago—subjected the city to the inspection of outsiders with eyes to see and the courage to tell the truth without regard for local sensibilities—it is discovered that for many years a community without one of the excuses that could be offered for the Cubans has been violating the commonest laws of health, if not to quite the same extent as did the much-scolded Islanders, at least in the same way, and there is some reason for suspecting that even the difference in extent was due rather to the comparative youth and better climate of Ithaca than to any essential suppriority of its inhabitants in the way of a desire to be clean as well as to seem clean. There, as in Cuba, it has been "out of sight, out of mind," and even now, when all the veils have been torn away from all the horrors, the proposition is to intrust the work of reform to a board composed of three Republicans and three Democrats! Why, in the name of common sense, not put it in the hands of one or more qualified sanitarians? So far as we know, no pure water issue separates the two political parties, and the need for balancing one of them against the other on such a matter is, to say the least of it, not obvious. But there, the new board will have some patronage at its disposal, some contracts to give out, some influence to exert on votes, and our astonishment is only a pretense. Political advantages cannot be forgotten for such a little thing as an epidemic of typhoid fever.

—With a severity that would have been hard indeed to bear if it did not contain a consolatory note of sorrow, The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle says that if we were not "lacking in discernment" we would not have had to ask why so many of our correspondents protested against a relaxation of the law prohibiting the maltreatment of cattle in transit, while not one of them had denounced the attempt to re-establish the allotment system under which the wages of sailors used to go into the pockets of crimps and Captains. "The difference of which THE TIMES complains," declares The Chronicle, "is, we think, easily found when sought for. It is simply because the sailor is regarded as a man, an intelligent human being that can take care of himself. The sight of a trainload of cattle being rushed without food or water to the shambles is often seen and rouses pity save in the breasts of the utterly callous. On the other hand, 'eyes that grow dim at the sight of a beaten hound' overlook altogether Jack Tar and never, indeed, see the squalid sections of the water fronts of our cities, of which the sailor is the mainstay and the prey." As precisely this theory, in somewhat less poetical language, had been offered by ourselves as an explanation which did not excuse public indifference to the robbery of sailors, The Chronicle cannot fairly expect us to be much impressed by what was certainly, in its case, easily found. It takes considerable pains, also, to prove that we were right in the contention that sailors are about as helpless to protect themselves as the cattle are, so we are at an utter loss to see how, in this particular matter, we demonstrated our lack of discernment even to one as keen-sighted as our Georgian critic.

—More wisdom from the Buffalo rivals of Sherlock Holmes! Examination of the Pennell automobile, as it lay wrecked after its fall into the stone quarry, revealed that the brakes were set and that the power indicator pointed to "Reverse," and from these facts they deduce that just before the accident Mr. PENNELL was doing his best to prevent it. This conclusion, as it makes against the suicide theory of the affair before, and as it accords fully with the testimony of those who saw the machine turn and go over the ledge, is probably true, but the logic by which it was reached is very crooked and shaky. According to all accounts, Mr. PENNELL, while not a very experienced chauffeur, was a competent one, and the chances are that he did not do two things, one of which destroyed the effect of the other, or at least tended to do so. With the brakes on, the effect of reversal would be lost wholly if the brakes held the wheels motionless, and partly if they permitted a slow backward revolution. If Mr. PENNELL did both put on his brakes and reverse his motor, what it proved is that he lost his presence of mind in the emergency. The condition of the machine, however, was due, probably enough, to the shock of its fall, and if that is so it proved nothing at all in respect to his intentions.

—With the ominous preface that "this is no snake story," The Savannah News proceeds to tell one that can be called anything else only on the theory that all snake stories are false and that this one is true and therefore worthy of another name. Anyhow, Dr. R. D. MCLEOD of Lyons, Ga., had a rattlesnake which he took in a box to the drug store of Mr. SHELTON HOWELL—it is best to give names in these cases—for exhibition and safe keeping. One day last week a rabbit and two frogs were placed in the box with the rattler, and when last seen late at night the snake seemed to be in an angry mood, but nothing interesting had happened to its ill-assorted companions. Next morning, when the store was opened, the rabbit was the only living thing in the box. The frogs had disappeared altogether, and the snake was not only dead, but it was more than half decapitated. Apparently the rabbit had killed the snake. This, The News says, is not a snake story. Well, perhaps it isn't. There is, however, a short word that would be a pretty good fit for it. The word is not a safe one to use in the South, and that, doubtless, is why it did not occur to The News.

CONRAD N. JORDAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me through the medium of your valued paper to say a few words in reference to our recently departed friend, the Hon. Conrad N. Jordan, late Assistant Treasurer of the United States. In doing so I know I shall but faintly express the sentiments of all the very numerous friends who are left to mourn his death.

He was one of nature's noblemen, and his mere presence was a benediction. His versatility and urbanity endeared him to all with whom he came in contact. He was thoroughly loyal to his friends, and in whatever position he was placed filled it with marked ability.

Truth his never failing shield.

For more than twenty years I was his friend, and was personally cognizant of his manly bearing in many difficult and most trying situations, and I have often listened to most hearty commendations of his attitude in these circumstances from his fellowmen. His nature was kind and forgiving, and he never cherished ill-feeling toward any opponent. Charitable and warm-hearted, he was always ready to extend a helping haud to any who needed it. Of manly presence, his dignity of character drew all hearts toward him. If to love thy neighbor as thyself and to do good to those who ill-use you is the fulfilment of the law, then I am sure that "well done, good and faithful servant," greeted him on the other shore.

At life's closing hour, when we part from our dear ones here, it will surely be a great consolation to feel the assurance that we shall meet such dear friends beyond the dark river. W. J. H.

CATHOLIC BELIEF IN CHRIST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to your report of the Delitzsch discussion, Dr. Harnack thinks the time is coming when all Protestant denominations, and also the Catholics, will give up their belief in Christ's divinity. Let him speak, if he may, for his fellow Protestants, but not for Catholics. For what signs has he noticed? In what Catholic pulpits has he heard any wavering in What Catholic theologian will he quote?

Allowing him, say, a thousand years, he may be right as regards Protestantism, if it will last so long. But just as certainly as the Catholic Church, through and beyond this period, will be imminent and eminent in the world—even her opponents find it "difficult to conceive how she is to perish" and her children know that from God's fiat she will be coterminous with time—so certainly will she hold her faith entire; so certainly will she adore the Real Presence; so certainly will she address the Blessed Virgin as the Mother of God; so surely will she confess that He who established her on the Rock of Peter was true God, who came down from heaven and was made man, and who shall come again with glory to judge the living and the dead. LAYMAN STANISLAUS.

SAYS GIRLS WERE ILL-TREATED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see by the press of to-day that three Syrian girls were held in a prison cell without food from early Saturday afternoon until late Sunday morning, when Magistrate Crane discharged them and said their arrest was an outrage, as they had city licenses to sell silk shawls.

As an eye witness of this arrest I should like you to make public the way inoffensive women are arrested in our free country. These girls were selling shawls when the police pounced on them, without warning, on the corner of Fourteenth Street and Sixth Avenue. The youngest of the three was so roughly dragged across the road that she fell full length in the mud in a dead faint. This excited no compassion. She was dragged to the sidewalk and flung into the patrol wagon in a most indecent fashion, her clothes being much disarranged. Her companion, who tried to loosen her collar, was seized by another policeman and her arms forced behind her until she screamed with pain. Her only act was to try to help her unconscious companion.

Prowsy Frank—Say, Helpless, old man, why do you wear such good togs?

Helpless Hal—Well, ye see, a beggar has to wear well dressed days or folks won't let him in de front door.—Chicago News.

Early.

"You will come home early, won't you?" she said as he was starting for the club.

"Oh, yes; I'll be home early," he replied.

"But, of course, dear," she persisted, "you understand that I mean early for night, not early to-morrow morning."—Chicago Post.

A Truthful Sign.

Mr. Longear—By the way, did you ever know that large ears are a sign of generosity?

Miss Beauti—Of course, Mr. Longear. They are a sign that nature has been generous.—New York Weekly.

BACK OF IT ALL.

E. S. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

I.

As he went to his daily tasks his way
Led down a lane that was mean and bare;
He journeyed along day after day
Beholding naught that was lovely there;
He went with a wish to be free to go
Where the winds were sweet and the vistas fair.

He thought of his tasks as he went along
And pitied himself for his hapless lot;
There was hate in his heart for the rich and strong,
He dreaded the toil that the long days brought,
And others passed onward and up to gain
The fair rewards that he once had sought.

II.

As he went to his hateful task one day
Another passed through the lane and where
He had seen but briers before, the gay
Sweet petals of flowers were blown in air;
The birds that never had sung before
Burst forth in a chorus of gladness there.

So, day by day, as he went along
A newer beauty enhanced the scene;
Day by day with her smile and song
Another gladdened what once was mean,

MR. SHEPARD ON WORLD PUBLIC SENTIMENT

Founder's Day Address at Tulane University, New Orleans.

Modern Power in the Determination of Affairs—Robert C. Ogden and Others Receive Degree of LL. D.

NEW ORLEANS, March 12.—Founder's Day was celebrated to-day by the various departments of Tulane University of Louisiana in Tulane Theatre. The occasion was marked by the presence of Edward M. Shepard of New York and President Robert C. Ogden of the Southern Educational Conference. Among those honored by the degree of LL.D. were Mr. Shepard, Mr. Ogden, and Chief Justice F. T. Nicholls of the Louisiana Supreme Court. Mr. Shepard made the principal address, saying, in part:

"I shall speak of the world public sentiment. I shall speak more especially of its growth, in the latter years of the nineteenth, and the first part of the twentieth century, to be a single, definite, practical, quickly effective force, and of all forces, the most powerful in organized civilization.

"Sometimes it is said, I think, absurdly if not unpatriotically, that it was only five years ago, during our Spanish War, that the United States really became a 'world power.' The saying seems to me quite unfitted to the true place in military and naval power and material respect of the world which our nation has held since Jackson's victory over British veterans 78 years ago, or since the announcement of the Monroe doctrine, or since the resolute assertion during Jackson's Presidency of our rights against foreign countries, or since our stupendous exhibition of military power during the civil war. We have for generations been a veritable world power, even if until lately we did not pass under the glamour of imperial or colonial policy.

"I beg of you to observe, however, that it is not of world powers of which I am now speaking, but of world power. We are not, on your Founder's Day, concerned with the lesser and relatively obsolete or obsolescent exercise of brute force in wars large or small. In due time we shall escape from the policing of the earth by iron and blood, at least, that police will move only rarely and when insensate folly shall be deaf to the command of an enlightened and benevolent world sentiment. The ultimate risk, even from a military or naval point of view, or that of commerce or finance, of offending that world sentiment, will be more serious than the risk of some specific and immediate offense against any one of the war lords of great nations.

"I am not to-day concerned with the 'world powers' known to diplomacy, the United States or Great Britain or Germany or France or Russia or Japan, but with the powerful sentiment of the whole world, which, under God, will rule all the 'world powers,' subduing all their diplomacies and armed forces. Already such a true world power, slight though it be to what the future will bring, controls from day to day specific National acts over very populous land and traveled sea within the 360 degrees of latitude; already are there world sentiments of right and wrong, of justice and spoliation, of mercy and cruelty, of glory and shame. Already is the power of the public sentiment of the world concretely exercised by commands to do or refrain, given within a few weeks or days or even a few hours after the deeds or events which call them out.

"Think how the news of the events, intentions, and even opinions of each people, great or small, in our time reaches all the rest. Think of the consideration, sympathetic or antipathetic, which each people gives each day to the behavior of every other people on the day before, or to the plans of the whole world for the day to follow. In our time the miracle in frustration of man's arrogance wrought at Babel is again reversed; and we hear every man in language instantly made intelligible to us all, Parthians and Medes and Elamites and the dwellers in Mesopotamia and in Judea and Cappadocia, in Pontus and Asia, strangers of Rome and Arabians—truly we do hear them all speak, as it were, in our own tongue, the wonderful works of God. Every morning the citizen of New Orleans, riding to his work, or at his breakfast, beholds a modern marvel to which usage has made him dull. His newspaper puts before him pictures of the world as it was the day before, a world at work, or at play, or in thought, a world contriving, planning, or dreaming its own future.

"To my mind the outpouring of the sentiment of the world over President Cleveland's Venezuelan message, seven or eight years ago, was the first distinctly clear exhibition of this popular force. For that outpouring every quarter of the earth had a share. By that time the improvements in railroad and ocean steamship travel and the extension of ocean telegraph cables had brought closely together all the great nations and colonies of the world so that each learned daily of the doings and sentiments of all the rest.

"What a stupendous power journalism has been of late. How it has welded together, in the belief of men, as God has welded together in underlying reality, the interests and the welfare of all the various peoples of the globe. Although a few prophets, a few moralists, a few far-seeing men of business had in earlier times known the profound truth of that reality, although from the beginning it had been taught by every divine oracle, until our time the realization had not reached the toilers of earth and sea—the sentiment had not gained the overwhelming and lasting power accorded only by the voice of the masses of humanity speaking as one man.

"Within the past few weeks an event not in itself of capital importance has given us another illustration, perhaps the most striking yet, of the power of a world public sentiment now fully come of age. But a month or two ago a few shot thrown by a German gunboat into a small South American fort brought an outcry the very next day from the whole world around. Venezuela cried out to the United States, and within a few hours after the unheroic bombardment every American newspaper had its say. Within forty-eight hours it was a topic in the British Parliament; within a few hours more the comments of statesmen there, and cablegrams from Washington were in the Foreign Offices of Berlin and Paris. The German war lord stayed his hand when he understood the world sentiment, and seemed willing to be soothed by a check from an American ironmaster, and his British ally was at once ashamed."

TEACHERS' RETIREMENT PLAN.

The teachers' retirement plan, drawn up by Auditor H. R. M. Cook of the Department of Education and which is now before the Board of Superintendents, may, with certain modifications, be made the basis of a legislative bill. The subject of retirement and legislation in regard to it has had the attention of the Principals' Association of the five boroughs of the city and a committee of five has been appointed to take steps in the direction of such legislation. It is believed that such a bill will be introduced in the present Legislature and that it will have the sanction of the Board of Education and the city authorities.

The committee having the matter in charge will incorporate in any bill it may report the following provisions: The retention of the fund idea retirement of all teachers, Principals, or members of the teaching force on one-half pay; the teachers to make up any deficit which may arise by authorizing an assessment of 1 per cent. on their salaries; to allow teachers to retire on a pro rata pension (1) at their own request after thirty years of service; (2) after fifteen or twenty years of service if they have become disabled; (3) upon the recommendation of the Superintendents after the age of sixty-five years, there being no discrimination between men and women; the retention of the 5 per cent. of the excess, manqua.

The Class Teachers' Organization of Brooklyn, of which John A. Cottrell is President, will to-morrow afternoon at Public School No. 15, at Third Avenue and State Street, Brooklyn, consider the preparation of a teachers' retirement bill. The meeting will be largely attended.

At the dinner of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District Republican Club in Madison Square Garden Concert Hall to-morrow evening President George W. Wickersham will act as toastmaster and ex-Lieut.-Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, the Rev. Dr. Brady M. Bitzer, rector of St. Thomas's, ex-Fire Commissioner James R. Sheffield, Senator Nathaniel A. Elsberg, and Job Hedges will speak. It is expected that fusion in the Mayoralty campaign next Fall will be the topic of some of the speakers.

It was the first in which [illegible]al and physical training privileges [illegible]ered; it was the place of organizati[illegible] the Society for the Suppression of Vice; [illegible] it was formed the Protestant Episcopal [illegible]ession, which became the Reformed Episcopal Church; closely identified with it was the International Committee in its beginnings, and Mr. Moody, having been brought to New York through the efforts of the Young Men's Christian Association, was largely instrumental in raising money for the erection of the structure. Many leaders of religious life have spoken in the building, and it was the centre of much of the labors of Robert McBurney, whose association work there had its influence [illegible] the organization throughout the country.

The purchase price of the site for the Twenty-third Street branch was $142,000, and the cornerstone of the building was laid in 1868. The building cost about $[illegible]000, and building and site have been sold in the negotiations [illegible] to the remaining for $830,000. The new site on Twenty-third Street near Seventh Avenue cost $[illegible] and the building there, which is to be completed in September, will cost $400,000.

G. W. Peterson and Others Leave United States Company's Service.

Ex-Finance Commissioner George W. Peterson of Jersey City, who for twelve years has been Superintendent of the Wagon Department of the United States Express Company at the stables, Ninth and Henderson Streets, resigned yesterday and was succeeded by W. H. Snyder. At the same time Chief Clerk W. H. Palmer, Veterinary Surgeon [illegible] C. Romer, and F. Romer, George A. [illegible] and J. [illegible] gett, clerks, tendered their resignations and retired. None of them would give any reason for leaving the company's employ.

EVENTS OF THE THEATRE

The Play and the Star Are Both "The Thing" Now.

The Actors' Home Benefit—"The Wizard of Oz" and "Hamlet" Equally Delight a Crowded Opera House.

A few weeks ago Mr. Daniel Frohman made the statement that in determining the success of a production the play is more important than the actors; and now Mr. Charles Frohman is reported to have said much the same in London. Such verdicts would bring more comfort if on the heels of them we had not been informed that the Empire and Lyceum companies—the last remnants of the stock company system—are to be abolished in favor of a system of nothing but stars. Where the play is really the thing, a well-rounded and well-balanced company is the prime requisite, and the star system is the mortal foe of this. It is not our purpose to raise the cry of inconsistency. Under one condition it is possible for both the play and the actor to be the thing, and that is that the plays be written for stars. This condition has in fact obtained for the past decade and more. In England the fortunes of the drama are controlled by the actor-managers; here they are controlled by syndicate-managed stars. Playwrights are tending more and more to make plays as Mrs. Osborne makes gowns—to fit a star and enhance her (or his) beauty and impressiveness.

From one point of view the recent announcement as to the abolition of stock companies is amusingly ingenuous, for as has often been pointed out in these columns, somewhat churlishly it is to be feared, the Lyceum stock company has long been a company and the Empire a monogamy. One has ceased to be and the other is in effect a twin star company that (instead of a repertory) plays its single play a year, like any other star organization.

***

What is the meaning of the fact that Mr. Frohman has refused to star Mr. Richman? It has not been our good fortune to be always pleased with his acting, but is he not the superior of some of the actors who are already stars? Few of them are of handsomer and more commanding presence, few of them are more sincere in intention, in the old Daly days he was a delightful Dollie Dimple, and if he had a star vehicle such as they were tending on the whole to disappear. Since Mr. Daly's death he has not advanced as much as was to have been expected. His faults are mainly of that sort that result from lax or uninteligent stage management. Under careful management Mr. Richman should be capable of excellent work. It is possible that he is to remain in the old association with Miss Anglin, which on the whole would be preferable on all grounds to an independent starring venture.

***

When Mr. Wilton Lackaye came out at 1 o'clock yesterday at the Metropolitan Opera House to set the ball of the Actors' Home benefit rolling ("seat slammer" is what he called himself,) he stated that the association spent $40,000 a year for the care of poor actors. Of course he meant those who are no longer on the stage; but the phrase suggested a charity as useful at least as the founding of libraries. The trouble is that—but perhaps these remarks are becoming unpleasantly personal. Certainly there was a good deal of talk on the afternoon of which The Opera House was crowded and enthusiastic for five hours on end. Mr. Lackaye deposed that over $1,000 had been turned away, which, as the best seats were $1.50, meant many disappointed people.

***

Mr. Sothern gave the scene between Hamlet and the Queen, in which he kills Polonius and sees the Ghost subjectively. It was vigorous as ever, and quite filled the auditorium. Again one was reminded of what a good Queen Miss Jennie Eustace makes and what strength her ripe vehemence lends to Mr. Sothern's effect. The Ghost was almost, or quite, invisible, and there were times in the audience when there had not Mr. Sothern had followed Mr. Mansfield's example and dispensed with his ghostly presence. But the real delinquent proved to be the calcium, which, as was explained, shone from too great a distance.

***

The selection from "Mr. Blue Beard" was "The Song Bird of Melody Lane," the chief interest of which, at least for the first nighters present, was the chance it afforded of watching the progress of the chorus girl, (she is Miss Romaine, is she not?) who astonished every one (and especially herself) by scoring the one individual success of the evening. Even on this occasion she showed herself to have a tendency to exaggerate her Bowery mincing and to become complicated in her gestures. Time has not lessened this tendency. She caught the eye of the house as usual, even the eye of many who had not been her previous admirers, and showed herself the genius of the song bird of Melody Lane, whatever her future may develop. But her best moments were those in which she sang least.

***

The double sextet of stars" who danced the famous dance from "Florodora" included Blanche Ring of "Jewel City," Edna Wallace Hopper of "Silver Slippers," Adele Ritchie of the Casino, Katie Barry of "The Chinese Honeymoon," May Vokes of "The Billionaire," and Helen Bertram of "Florodora," who were accompanied by Messrs. James T. Powers, Harry Sykes, Sam Bernard, Thomas Q. Seabrooke, Robert E. Graham, and Edwin Ray. Jimmy Powers ate the apple, but did not do the other thing which was according to Genesis, but the matter was slighted, we learn, in the general excitement.

The new play was on the programme. It was a one-act comedietta by Clay M. Greene, and it was called "The End of the Honeymoon." There were only two parts, and these were well filled by Margaret Anglin and Frits Williams. The play consisted in a conjugal quarrel over the question of the husband's evenings out, complicated with questions of what the wife had been doing in his absence. (Be reassured, ladies. He had only been at the club, and she, in spite of her jealousy and an evening gown, had been visiting aunties.) A clever satirical sparring match was ended by a passage of theatrical sentiment in which both decided that the honeymoon should last forever. Perhaps it was the vastness of the house and the drawing room voices of the actors that made the little play seem unsubstantial. One line sticks in memory. The husband, who had been at the club six nights in ten, explained the last by saying that when a man had the most beautiful wife in the world he needed every opportunity to brag about it.

***

"The Darling of the Gods" was represented by Ye San, Kara, and the War Minister, who all wore the evening clothes of the Occident, and presented one of Frohman's acting plays, "Her Aunt's Adventure." The original, which was written a good slice of a century ago by a couple of Frenchmen whose names were not on the programme, had been recast in parts and ended with a gag from Weber and Fields's, which, by the way, did not participate—even the anti-syndicate barred) Miss Bates was the old splendid self, her young splendid self, whatever assortment of adjectives she may choose. She was as much at home in farcing room comedy as when playing Cassette or Ye San, and she was even more beautiful. It may be questioned, however, whether her conception of the wife was of the happiest. A wife who makes her husband and makes pretended love to a guest for her own selfish ends can be truly sympathetic on the stage only if played frankly in the spirit of farce. Miss Bates was energetic and bubbling; but the silly and paradoxical grace of the French authors clearly intended. Mr. Haines was vigorous and sincere as the husband. As the guest whom the wife made love to in order to drive him out of her house Mr. George Arliss was a delightful George, an actor of extraordinary tact and delicate effects.

***

The Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman of "The Wizard of Oz" danced in their wooden way, which is the happiest way of the dance, at Weber & Fields's last night. Such excellent comedians in their line have delighted the metropolis and much praise to the pantomime of England, in which they are said to have learned their art.

***

Lillian Russell was in her finest feather and all the other finest things that keep her the marvelous creation she is. Her songs were not of the Weberfield variety, and from where Willie Collier sat in a box with "Louise" (as he calls her at Weber & Fields') he was unable to spring his usual personal gags or pay his usual adoring compliments. Blanche Ring as "The Belle of Avenue A" seemed hardly to fill the auditorium; but in "Good Old Summer Time" she made a deliciously frank appeal to the audience to sing the chorus with her, and presently had floods of whistled and shouted melodies issuing from floor, boxes, and gallery.

Mr. Grant Stewart contributed a series of verses, with music by Manuel Klein, which served to gather together "A Bunch of Buds from Broadway's Beauties." These included Marie Doro, Bonnie Magin, Grace Cameron, Stella Tracey, Marguerite Clark, and Nellie Follis, each with a bevy of beauties from her company who danced attendance.

VAUDEVILLE AT KEITH'S.

Bill Headed by Milton and Dollie Nobles in a Laughable Sketch.

A standard feature in vaudeville, the one-act comedy written by Milton Nobles and called "Why Walker Reformed," is being performed at Keith's this week by the actor-author and his wife, Dollie Nobles. It is an interesting exhibit as being far removed from the ordinary rough-and-tumble sketch of the variety theatres. Its general theme—the misunderstandings that come to a young couple on account of an overindulgence in stimulants on the part of the husband—is by no means an unfamiliar expedient for laughter, but in this case it is handled with rather more delicacy both in the writing and in the acting than is usual.

Mr. Nobles brings to his part the results of many years of legitimate training and study. What he does on the stage, even in this vaudeville sketch, evinces thought. He does not strain for points, but it is evident that chance has played no part in the result. The average vaudevillian most often trusts to luck for his effects—for a time, at least, until the responsive laughter of his auditors tells him that such "business" as he has introduced on trial is effective. Then it is incorporated once and for all. Mr. Nobles's method of playing might be studied with advantage not only by the professionals with whom he has cast his lot in the last few years, but also by several who pose as Broadway favorites, and who would probably be inclined to sniff their noses at the suggestion that they might learn something in the vaudeville theatres. And in point of judicious restraint Dollie Nobles aptly reflects the excellences which characterise her husband's work.

"Tom Walker" has been twitted by his friend with the suggestion that he is tied to his wife's apron strings. She is as indignant at this as is he, and insists that he make a night of it "at the club with the boys" just to show his independence of feminine authority. But Tom, who evidently goes on the theory that all good things come in threes, elects to spend three successive evenings in demonstrating the fact. The wife is naturally disconsolate. When the curtain rises she is waiting for the return of her husband at 1:30 o'clock in the morning.

When she hears his shuffling footsteps outside she hides. After some difficulty in opening the door he enters. He has the door key in his mouth and a cigarette between his fingers, and the cause of his delay is obvious.

Then follows some excellent pantomiming on the part of Mr. Nobles, and he finally removes his whole upper torso from the hands of the clock to 11:30, and remarks, "You'll never miss a couple of hours from an eight-day clock." His wife, without his knowledge, proceeds to put the hands forward to 8:30. In consequence, when she confronts him and upbraids him for coming home so late, he turns the clock back to make it tell the time she wants, and he "must have turned the hands the wrong way." In answer to his wife's scolding he remarks:

"Say, I know when I have enough. That's something I always liked about me." And the good-humored air of self-satisfaction is distinctly amusing. He finds that he hasn't a cent in his pockets, which moves him to remark with a chuckle:

"Jones thinks he can play poker. Why, I can play poker better than Jones seven days in the week but—(the empty pocket confronts him)—some people never have anything put luck."

He has several answers to his wife's question which strike him as being extremely humorous, and he is tearful because he has been unable to think of the "good one" at the club.

The sketch is brought to a close by an amusing complication due to the fact that Walker has worn Jones's overcoat home from the club. His wife finds a love letter in it, and for the first time doubts her husband. She also brings forth from the overcoat two empty champagne bottles, a cigar box, and a pair of gloves. Walker later finds these things, and surmises that his wife has been entertaining a rival. Finally everything is happily explained in an amusing manner in which Walker insists upon his wife reading a letter which exonerates him completely.

"Why Walker Reformed" is not ambitious, but it is a good comedy of its particular kind—and not a bad kind at that.

Another feature in the Keith bill this week, though representing an opposite phase of vaudeville effort, is provided by "The Nawns," "who rank," the programme announces, "as the very highest type of Irish character artists." Their sketch, "One Touch of Nature," is merely a slender thread of narrative designed to hold together the verbal exchanges of Tom Nawn and his woman partner, who has little to do save act as a "feeder" to him.

Tom Nawn appears as an Irish hod-carrier of the conventional type. He wears red "galways" and a scraggy shock of red hair revealing a pink bald pate. The make-up is as broad as the comedian's dialect and acting, which falls into the realm of low comedy of a somewhat boisterous kind.

The woman is discovered at the opening of the act setting the table for supper. She complains that "father is late, as usual," and she fears that the fine meal she has prepared will be spoiled by standing too long. Then the man enters. When she dilates upon the excellent supper prepared for him he wants to know what is to be served.

A look of intense disgust overspreads his countenance.

"Nora," he asks, "kin ye niver think of anything but corn beef and cabbage? I've ate it so much beef that I'm ashamed to look a cow in the face."

A moment later she returns from the kitchen and announces that Hennessy's dog has run away with the beef.

"Now I'll be havin' a row wid Hennessy," says the man, "for killin' his dog." Then, as an afterthought, he adds, "Call the dog back and give him the cabbage."

When Nora asks permission to go to a masquerade ball with one Tim Murphy her father grabs up a plate and threatens to break it over her head.

"Don't you know he's me mortal enimy?" he asks. "He dropped a brick on me head only last week."

"But he didn't know you were my father," explains the girl by way of extenuation.

She tries to persuade him to join them at the masquerade, and as an inducement says:

"You can go as a policeman. You won't need a mask. You look just like a policeman."

"Indade?" says he of the "galways." "I thought I'd been in this country longer than that."

As a finish to the act the man puts on roller skats and gives an exhibition of grotesque skating that is skilful and provokes much laughter and applause.

Some idea of the kind of material served up by Stinson and Merton may be had from the fact that the male member of the team at one point asks:

"Does anybody in the audience know what we are doing?"

It is safe to say that no one would have the temerity to describe it. The pair have many exchanges of cross-fire talk, some of which is broadly amusing.

"I am going to give imitations of many birds and beasts of the forest, and one fish," says the man, and he thereupon proceeds to give burlesque imitations. Continuing, he says, "Imitation of a fish under thirty feet of water." A moment's silence. "That's the imitation," he explains "the fish is under water, so you can't hear it."

Joseph Sabel, a vivacious "chanteuse"; Caroline Shepherd, oratorio singer; the Morello brothers, acrobats; James Dooley, a blackface comedian; La Petite Adelaide, and Kennedy and Adams, dancing comedians, are others in the Keith bill this week.

NOTES OF THE THEATRES.

On Monday night the Frohman Stock Company, at Proctor's 125th Street, will begin a week's engagement in "Peter Pan," which has been so successful at the Empire Theatre. Miss Maude Adams will be seen in the title role.

Lillian Russell will be the principal attraction at Keeler's Theatre next week, her offering being a new version of "Wildfire," by Clyde Fitch, which was produced last Spring at the Garden Theatre, Atlantic City, and afterwards at the Grand Opera House, Philadelphia. Miss Russell will be supported by Frank Daniels and his company.

Mr. Sothern's Hamlet and the Queen of Miss Jennie Eustace will be the principal attractions at the Lyceum Theatre next week. Mr. Sothern's Hamlet has been seen in this city for a long time, and Miss Eustace's Queen has been a familiar one for many years. The Lyceum company will be seen in "The Dictator" and "The Rivals" for the last time this week.

Mr. Wilton Lackaye will be the principal attraction at the Grand Opera House next week, his offering being Clyde Fitch's dramatization of Balzac's "Père Goriot," which was produced last Spring at the Garden Theatre, Atlantic City, and afterwards at the Grand Opera House, Philadelphia. Mr. Lackaye will be supported by Miss Ethel Barrymore.

Mr. Richard Mansfield will be the principal attraction at the Garden Theatre next week, his offering being Shaw's "Man and Superman," which was produced last Spring at the Garden Theatre, Atlantic City, and afterwards at the Grand Opera House, Philadelphia. Mr. Mansfield will be supported by Miss Beatrice Cameron.

Mr. Richard Harding Davis's "The Dictator" will be the principal attraction at the Herald Square Theatre next week, his offering being a revival of "The Rivals" by the company now in "The Dictator" and "The Rivals" for the last time this week

GOLFER BELL INJURED.

Chicago Professional Meets with a Serious Accident in New Orleans.

Eastern golfers will be sorry to learn that David Bell, the well-known Chicago professional and one of the best golfers in the United States, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured in New Orleans a few days ago, and it is doubtful, even should he recover, if he will be able to play at all this coming season. It is reported that Bell slipped at the head of a flight of stairs in his boarding house and fell down the entire flight, fracturing several bones in the back of his neck and completely paralyzing his body. He was picked up unconscious and removed to a hospital in New Orleans. It will be several days at least before he can be moved.

Bell has been in New Orleans all Winter taking care of the Audubon Golf Club course, the leading golf club in Louisiana. He and Willie Smith, a former open champion of America, have been the professionals at the Midlothian Country Club, near Chicago, for several years. In 1900, the year Harry Vardon won the National open championship at the Chicago Golf Club, Bell led the American professionals. He has always been a formidable competitor in open tournaments. For the past few years he has spent the Winters on the Southern and California links. Bell has had a rather eventful career for the past two years. He met with an accident just before his return to the Midlothian Club last season. While touring in California with his partner, Smith, he fell off a bicycle and broke his ankle. The injury laid him up nearly half the season.

Alexander Baxter, an assistant professional at Midlothian, was assisting Bell at New Orleans, and was with him at the time of the accident.

Cornell Wins at Basket Ball.

In the Pratt Institute gymnasium, on Ryerson Street, Brooklyn, last night the Cornell University basket ball team defeated the Institute five by a score of 11 to 6. The home team made a good showing in the first half, and held the visitors down to a score of 6 to 3, but in the second period the aggressive playing of the Cornell team enabled them to score 4 goals from the field to their opponents' 1, besides obtaining 3 to 1 on fouls. The line-up follows:

Cornell, 11.	Positions.	Pratt, 6.
Brinckerhoff	Right forward	Wright
Wadsworth	Centre	Dix
Townsend, Cuff	Left guard	Preston

Goals for Cornell—From Field—Hermes (4), Brinckerhoff, Townsend. From Fouls—Hermes 3. Goals for Pratt—From Field—Preston (2), Wright. From Foul—Preston. Referee—H. Masburn.

BASEBALL GROUNDS FIXED

American League Gets Site on Manhattan Island.

Joseph Gordon Will Be President of the New York Club—Contractors Will Begin Work To-day.

On Manhattan Island, between One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street on the south, One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Street on the north, Eleventh Avenue on the east, and Fort Washington Road on the west, the American Baseball League has secured a site for playing grounds on which the new New York baseball team will open the playing season of 1903 as scheduled on April 30. At the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night President Ban Johnson made this announcement and introduced Joseph Gordon of this city as the President of the New York American League Club, which, under the title of the New York Baseball Club, soon will be incorporated under the laws of New York State and capitalized at $100,000.

The grounds are not intersected by One Hundred and Sixty-sixth and One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Streets, and are the largest baseball grounds in the country. On the east side the plot is 797 feet long, while on the west side the length is 778 feet, on the north 698 feet wide, and on the south 536 feet wide. The One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Street station of the new underground road is located at the northeast corner of the grounds. As the subway will not be completed in time for use this year, patrons of the American League will be compelled to use the surface roads, which pass within a block of the property on Amsterdam Avenue. The Third and Sixth Avenue trolleys go direct to the grounds, while all the elevated roads transfer to the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street cross-town line, which also goes past the grounds.

It will be necessary to do some blasting on the property in order to get it in shape, but the contractors will begin work this morning, and work on the stands will follow within a few days. There will be seating capacity for 16,000 spectators. The plans for the stands have been submitted to the Building Department and a permit has been granted to proceed with the work. The property belongs to the New York Institute for the Blind, and has been leased by the American League Club for ten years.

There will be four stands, a grand stand and three others. The grand stand will accommodate 6,000 persons and the seating capacity of the other three will be about 10,000. The grounds also will be used for athletic events and football games.

The corporation of which Mr. Gordon is President is very strong financially, being backed by several prominent and wealthy citizens. Mr. Gordon himself has long been associated with professional baseball, as he was President of the Metropolitan Baseball Club twenty years ago and was identified with the New York Club, when John B. Day was President of that organization. Mr. Day will be associated with the new club's management, but in what capacity has not as yet been determined. Mr. Gordon is a member of the New York Athletic, Democratic, Tilden, and Pontiac Clubs. He was a member of the Legislature in 1888 from this city and Superintendent of Buildings in New York two years ago.

A few days ago President Johnson would have announced the location of the new grounds, but there were legal obstacles in his way. In fact, ever since the American League officials declared their intention of invading New York territory their efforts to do so were met with stubborn opposition, and some of their best laid plans were frustrated by those whose interests would be affected by the placing here of a rival baseball club. It was essential to the best interests of the American League Club promoters to work as quietly as possible, so that all of their plans would not be divulged, and so well did they accomplish their purpose that, while many available and suitable sites were mentioned from time to time, not a word was spoken or published about the grounds which now have been leased and secured for ten years.

All along President Johnson maintained that everything he had promised to the New York followers of baseball would be fulfilled, and when he made the long-looked-for announcement last night he appeared to be the happiest man in New York. Speaking of the mass of work which he, as well as the other American League officials had gone through since the close of last year's playing season, and the assistance rendered them by outsiders, Mr. Johnson said:

"It was in the latter part of August, at a meeting of the American League Club held in Cleveland, that we took our first official action toward invading New York City. The American League voted to foot all the bills until satisfactory partners had been secured in New York, and as the money was quickly forthcoming, little time was lost in securing the necessary players. On the receipt of advice from Boston, we found that we could gather in many Pittsburg players—Leach, Tannehill, Chesbro, Bransfield, Conroy, Smith, O'Connor, and Davis.

"All of them were signed except Bransfield. Leach, Conroy, and Smith later jumped their contracts and went back to Pittsburg. At the recent peace conference at Cincinnati, Bransfield was awarded to the New York Americans. Manager Griffith played an active part in rounding up the players for the New York team and signing all of them except Willie Keeler. It took a great deal of money to land this team, which, I do not hesitate to believe, will rank high among the leaders in the American League pennant race.

"Early steps were then taken to secure grounds in this city. So much had been said about the advisability of locating on Manhattan Island that it was natural for us to look for grounds below the Harlem River. W. E. Callender, a real estate man, acted as our agent here, and it was he who opened negotiations for the Lenox Avenue property, extending from One Hundred and Forty-second Street east of the Harlem River. A part of this property belonged to the Pinckney estate and the balance to Mrs. Curtis.

"Mrs. Curtis positively refused to lease the property, but was willing to sell. After negotiations running through six weeks a proposition in writing was submitted by the lawyer for the two estates holding for a ten-year lease of the Pinckney estate and the sale of the Curtis estate for $225,000. This proposition was immediately accepted by wire and later confirmed by letter. C. W. Somers, J. P. Kilfoyl, and others were the ones who were ready to buy the Curtis estate.

"From the very beginning the lawyer for the estates positively assured us that One Hundred and Forty-third Street could be closed according to law. The petition was to be made by Mr. Pinckney, asking that the street be closed for business purposes. But before this was done the advantages of interesting August Belmont were shown to us. Douglas Robinson was the man who made a proposition to Mr. Belmont for the purchase of the Pinckney estate. The American League furnished satisfactory financial references, and we finally received advices that everything would go through without a hitch.

"We never knew the matter would come before the Board of Directors of the Rapid Transit Construction Company, else we would have taken a different shift. It is now generally known how the matter was sidetracked. The lawyer for the estates then tried to carry out his original arrangements with us, much time being lost thereby, and at the end of three weeks he threw up his hands declaring that it was impossible to close One Hundred and Forty-third Street. This whole proceeding absorbed so much time that we were naturally hard pressed, so that quick action seemed necessary.

"Early in the Winter I was advised by Mr. Gordon that he had an option on a plot of ground on Manhattan Island. I met him early in January, and at that time he said that if we failed at Lenox Avenue he would be glad to take the matter up with us. At the time of the peace conference at Cincinnati I was confined to my bed for a month, which prevented me from reaching Mr. Gordon, so there was another delay. When I finally arrived here I learned that it would take even more time to close Mr. Gordon's proposition, for he informed me then that no lease could be executed for the property before the 6th of March.

"The Board of Directors for the New York Institute for the Blind, which controls the property, does not meet except at certain times, and President Schermerhorn said it would be impossible to call a special meeting of the board, so that we had to wait until last Friday before a committee from the Directors of the Institute could meet the Gordon syndicate. That committee did not report back to the institute until 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, when the whole deal was ratified.

"Had there been a slip up on this property, we had everything shaped to the minute to sign a lease for the Astor estate at One Hundred and Sixty-first Street and Jerome Avenue, in which event the American League would have conducted the club. Other sites that we looked at were One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and Second Avenue, and four sites in the Bronx. It was the Astor estate which had to be surveyed on Tuesday, so that the public can see how closely we had to draw the lines. We could not fail in this undertaking, for we always had an anchor to windward, and there never was a moment when we were not confident of success."

BASEBALL AT PRINCETON.

First Open Air Practice Game of the Season—Old Players Shifted in Positions.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 12.—The good weather brought the university baseball candidates on the field to-day for the first practice game of the season. After a long batting and fielding drill the candidates were made up into two teams. The first nine was composed of Capt. Pearson, first base; Wells, second base; Amell, short stop; Forsythe, third base; Roys, right field; Cosgrave, centre field; Davis, left field; Young, catcher. No Varsity pitchers were tried. This line-up shows two marked changes in the positions of old players—Wells is at second instead of third and Davis is left guard instead of right. Amell and Roys were the infield and outfield substitutes, respectively, last season.

The candidates for the nine are showing much improvement from their two weeks' work. The battery and fielding are both much better, and with a little outdoor practice will rapidly round into shape. Coach Hillebrand is paying particular attention to the battery positions. At present it appears that Stevens is the only man that can be relied upon absolutely. Underhill has never recovered fully from a stiffness of his muscles of last Summer, while Dunscombe has been dropped. Stevens met with what might have been a rather serious accident on Wednesday, but was fortunate in the outcome. While batting in the cage a ball glanced from his bat and struck his cheek bone. At first it was thought that the bone had been broken, but only a bad bruise has resulted. He is at work again.

W. E. Green, '02, Captain of the championship '01 team, is assisting in the coaching. He will remain until the season fully opens.

Fordham Baseball Outlook Bright.

The baseball situation at Fordham College is considered to be the brightest in Fordham's history. The material is so good that Coach Smith is puzzled over the selection of catcher, shortstop, second base, and right field. At short Healy, of last year's freshman squad, is playing in remarkable form, and Hartman, who played in that position last season, will have to improve a great deal to retain his former place. Three men are down for second, H. Hartman, Curtin, and Gonzales, all new men, and as they are of equal calibre, that position will probably be the last to be filled. For catcher, there are three good players: Plunkett, King, and Dady, who caught and captained the second nine last season. Plunkett is probably the only one up to Varsity form, yet Coach Smith says that the selection for that position will be a surprise.

Right field has Smith, Oliver, McLean, and Brennan competing, and it is likely that McLane will be picked, as he pitched for the second team last season. He is a good hitter, can play first base, and take care of any outfield position. Manager Paoli received an application from Golden, the umpire, a few days ago, to officiate in all the important games this Spring. It is thought that he will be engaged.

STAR ATHLETES ENTERED.

Records May Be Broken at the Irish A. A. Games in Madison Square Garden To-morrow.

The Greater New York Irish Athletic Association games to be held at Madison Square Garden to-morrow night promise to be the largest indoor athletic event held this season, and the number and quality of the entries indicate that new records may be made. More than 400 athletes have entered, and they include a number of world's record holders, besides the pick of National, metropolitan, and intercollegiate performers.

The two most interesting events on the programme are the two-mile intercollegiate relay race and the ten-mile Amateur Athletic Union championship race. Yale, Pennsylvania, Columbia, and Cornell are entered for the relay race. Yale holds the indoor record and Pennsylvania the outdoor record for the distance, and both are picked for first place. Columbia, however, at the recent Twenty-second Regiment Armory games, when she did not have her best team in the field, gave Yale a hard tussle. As a result of a competition held in Ithaca yesterday, Trainer John Moakley selected for the Cornell relay team B. Smith and D. McMeekin, who are crack half-mile runners, and M. C. Overman and W. C. Schutt.

All the local clubs have runners in the ten-mile event, and among the fifty entries are Alex. Grant, the five-mile National champion; A. C. Bowen of the University of Pennsylvania, the two-mile intercollegiate champion; Joyce, the five-mile junior champion; E. P. Carr of the Xavier Athletic Club, who has defeated both Joyce and Bowen; Frank Lubich, the New England champion, and Charles Maher, the one-mile junior champion.

In the pole vault handicap J. C. Preston, Yale; J. B. Phillips, Cornell, and A. G. Anderson, New York Athletic Club, are the scratch men, and Myer Prinstein, the noted broad jumper, is allowed ten inches. "Jim" Mitchell, New York Athletic Club, is the scratch man in the fifty-six-pound weight for height event.

Results of New Orleans Races.

NEW ORLEANS, March 12.—The Way, a strong favorite in the betting, scored an easy victory in the Bush Cup Handicap, at two miles and a quarter. The race was worth $1,680 to the winner, who also received a piece of plate valued at $300. Opening at twos, The Way was backed down to 7 to 5, the Corrigan pair, Zazel and Leflare, being next in demand, at 3 to 2. Fuller rated The Way very cleverly through a mile and a half, worked his way up to the leaders on the final turn, and came away at the end without an effort. The weather was showery and the track heavy.

FIRST RACE.—One mile. Marshal Neil, 108 pounds, (Gannon,) 1 to 4, won; Antonius, 108, (Fuller,) 6 to 1, second; Insolence, 105; Munro, 80 to 1, third. Time—1:52 2-5. The Bouncer, Sir Fitzhugh, Luna Minor, and Our Lady also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Selling; six furlongs. Suburban Queen, 97 pounds, (Hanek,) 8 to 1, won; Russellton, 111, (Calvin,) 40 to 1, second; Flora Levy, 89, (Wishard,) 60 to 1, third. Time—1:21 1-5. Mollie T., Miss Aubrey, Vera Verdier, Rastus, Joe Buckley, Breaker, and King Dodo also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Seven furlongs. Embarrassment, 112 pounds, (Winkfield,) 2 to 5, won; War Cry, 103, (Phillips,) 7 to 1, second; Handspinner, 104, (Fuller,) 12 to 5, third. Time—1:28 1-5. Hand Organ, Pirate, The Skater, and Sapere also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—The Bush Cup Handicap; two miles and a quarter. The Way, 94 pounds, (Fuller,) 7 to 5, won; Zazel, 96, (Davidson,) 3 to 2, second; Leflare, 107, (Winkfield,) 5 to 2, third. Time—4:22 1-5. Major Mansir, Erne, and Jessie Jarboe also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Six furlongs; selling. Peter Duryea, 110 pounds, (McLoynt,) 20 to 1, won; The Bronze Demon, 104, (Munro,) 10 to 1, second; Blue Blaze, 105, (Phillips,) 3 to 1, third. Time—1:22 4-5. Sister Kate II., Moroni, Little Chico, and Worthington also ran. Ben Frost pulled up.

SIXTH RACE.—Selling; mile and seventy yards. Illuminate, 99 pounds, (Fuller,) 7 to 2, won; Star Gazer, 103, (Hicks,) 16 to 1, second; Thurles, 99, (Trooman,) 9 to 1, third. Time—1:53 2-5. Marion Lynch, Charles D., Eliza Dillon, and Glenaan also ran.

New Orleans Entries for To-day.

MANY CRICKET GAMES.

Long Schedule Arranged by the New York Association—Season Will Open May 9.

The New York Cricket Association drew up its championship schedule of games yesterday at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, where delegates from the Brooklyn, Manhattan, Paterson, Newark, Essex County, Branch Brook, Columbia Oval, Thistle, and West Indian Clubs were in attendance. Considerable time was occupied in hearing the claims of a contesting delegation which appeared to represent the Manhattan Cricket Club. It was finally decided to postpone action on this matter until the next meeting of the association, which will be held in two weeks. In the meanwhile the delegates appointed at the annual meeting of the Manhattans held on Feb. 16 will stand as the accredited representatives. Following is the schedule:

May 9—Manhattan against Thistles, at Prospect Park, and Essex County against Brooklyn, at Branch Brook Park, Newark.

May 16—Manhattan against West Indians, at Prospect Park; Brooklyn against Branch Brook, at Prospect Park.

May 23—Essex County against West Indians, at Prospect Park; Brooklyn against Branch Brook, at Prospect Park.

TURBINE YACHTS COMING.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Buys Tarantula—Emerald Due Next Month for George Gould.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., through the agency of Tams, Lemoine & Crane, yacht brokers, has about completed arrangements for the purchase of the turbine yacht Tarantula from the estate of Col. Harry L. D. McCalmont. The yacht is now at Southampton and will probably be seen here in July.

The Tarantula is 160 feet long, and in appearance greatly resembles a torpedo boat. She was built to run twenty-four knots an hour, but in her trials she attained the remarkable speed of 26.75 knots. She was built by Yarrow & Co., and is fitted with Yarrow boilers. The turbines, her distinguishing feature, were constructed at the Turbine Works by the Parsons Company. There are three turbines on three propeller shafts, and there are three screws on each shaft. One of the turbines is high pressure, and is on the central shaft, while the two low-pressure turbines are on the outside shafts.

Besides the Tarantula, two other British-built yachts fitted with the Parsons turbine will be seen in these waters this season. They are the Lorena, built by Ramage & Ferguson of Leith for A. L. Barber of this city, and the Emerald, built by Sir Christopher Furness, and chartered for the season by George J. Gould. The Emerald will arrive here next month, and will be the first turbine-driven boat to have crossed the Atlantic. Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Barber, and Mr. Gould are all members of the New York Yacht Club.

City Island Yacht News.

Special to The New York Times.

CITY ISLAND, March 12.—A new speed launch of the hunting type is rapidly nearing completion at the yard of A. Hansen for Dr. Morton Peck. A low house is situated forward, aft of which will be a 20-horse power gasolene engine. The yacht was designed by the builder, and is guaranteed to maintain a speed of 12 miles an hour. Her dimensions are 52 feet long over all, 45 feet on the water line, 10 feet beam, and 3 feet 6 inches draught. The auxiliary sloop yacht Meda, also owned by Dr. Peck, has been overhauled and rebuilt at the same yard.

The new steel steam yacht under construction at the Jacob yard for Spencer Kellogg, from designs of Henry J. Gielow, is rapidly taking form. The frame is up and about one-half the steel plating is thus far in place.

The Losier Engine Company of Plattsburg has decided upon a site at the mouth of the Westchester Creek for their new Eastern factory. Piling and docks are now under way in an endeavor to complete the buildings and permit the handling of a portion of the Eastern work this year.

CAPE ELIZABETH LIGHT VESSEL.

Notice is hereby given, by order of the Lighthouse Board, that on March 7, 1903, Light Vessel No. 14 was established, in about 150 feet of water, 10 feet southward and eastward of West Cod Ledge and the entrance to Portland Harbor, and about 6 miles southeasterly from Cape Elizabeth Light Station. The vessel shows two inner lantern lights, each from three lens lanterns encircling the mast, fixed white on the mainmast about 45 feet above sea level, and fixed red from the foremast, about 33 feet above the same level. The lights may be seen in clear weather 8 and 11 miles, respectively, to the observer's eye 15 feet above sea level. The vessel is a flush-deck, steam light vessel, has two masts, schooner-rigged, with a red, circular, wire daymark at each masthead. The hull is red, with "Cape Elizabeth" in white on each side, and "74" in white on each bow and each quarter. The masts are white, with a black smokestack between them, and the fog signal between the stack and the mainmast. The boats are red and the lanthornes white. During thick or foggy weather a 12-inch steam chime whistle sounds blasts of three seconds' duration separated by silent intervals of 27 seconds, thus; Blast, 3 seconds; silent interval, 27 seconds; blast, 3 seconds; silent interval, 27 seconds. The approximate geographical position of the vessel, as taken from Chart No. 106 of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, is: Latitude, north, 43 degrees 31 minutes; longitude, west, 70 degrees 5 minutes. Bearings and distances of prominent objects from the vessel are: Halfway Rock Lighthouse, NNE. ¼ E., 6¾ miles; Wood Island Lighthouse, W. ¾ S., 1¼ miles; Cape Elizabeth East Lighthouse, NW. ¼ W., 5¼ miles; Portland Head Lighthouse, NNW. ¾ W., 8¾ miles. Bearings are magnetic and given approximately; miles are nautical miles.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks irregular.

The market yesterday was plainly in a waiting mood. Operators either for the fall or the decline were evidently reluctant to do much without better development of the monetary situation, upon which there can only be conjecture until the next bank statement. Bank officers who were asked what would be the effect if the surplus should become a deficiency replied, "Nothing in particular." There might be some calling of loans in special cases, but nothing affecting the general situation. The period until money will begin to return to New York and restore the reserves in a normal manner is so slight that it can be bridged over without trouble by using the reserves for the best purpose to which they can be put, and for which they are intended. The increase in the value of February exports by twenty millions throws ample light upon how the Panama Canal payment will be financed without burden. And this increase is made under such difficulties in the way of inland transportation that there is every reason to suppose that the indicated tendency of growth will strengthen. Under such conflicting influences the market developed no certain tone nor large movement. Among active properties only half a dozen changed their figures so much as a point, and those changes, like the fractions, were about equally divided between advances and declines.

The Bank of England at last reports some gain in its bullion and consequently in its condition upon both a weekly and yearly comparison. But, unfortunately, the apparent improvement is discounted by the Bank having recently increased its buying price for gold. Supplies thus obtained are, of course, not responsive to the Bank rate, which naturally cannot be reduced until the improvement is both larger and more normal. Gold bought like merchandise, and, flowing against instead of with the currents of international trade, has a way of taking to itself wings very easily. The significance is that England, the world's banker, is, for the moment, the world's debtor. And, upon the other hand, despite our currency complications, we are creditors of the world. We still have the securities England sent us in return for foodstuffs which she has eaten and other merchandise now consumed. She must have more, and she cannot pay the price again in the same manner. Perhaps the time is coming when our ability to sell to England will depend upon our readiness to take the price in securities manufactured to supply the demand. What would have happened to England if she had not had the securities to send us, and how much gold we would have imported if we had not taken back our stocks are interesting conjectures. The fact is that the gold in the Treasury increased during the current fiscal year nearly $400,000,000. It is something like a demonstration that England is losing and we are gaining dominance in the world's gold markets. But our gain may be as temporary as England's loss. We had a distressing object lesson in the fact that our Treasury gold goes as easily as it comes. The Treasury has no such command over its gold supply as has the Bank of England, nobody having the right to refuse gold upon any lawful demand nor the power to attract it except by purchase from the proceeds of bond sales. Whether or not other National banks shall gain or lose gold is a matter of discretion. With our Treasury it is a matter of bankruptcy. This is a good time to remember these facts.

FEATURES OF THE MARKET.

For the greater part of the day the market merely backed and filled, advancing one minute and declining the next without any definite tendency. The tone, however, remained firm, and while there was no wild or enthusiastic rush to buy it was very clear that the bears were not disposed to extend their short lines to any great or further extent. In the final half hour, it is true, they showed somewhat more courage and, aided by realizing sales, the report of a transfer of $200,000 to New Orleans, and the extreme heaviness of Sugar Trust stock succeeded in forcing a general reaction. Only a few issues, however, declined more than fractionally.

It may be a matter of wonder that the Street, which usually talks of millions as lightly as of thousands, should have given any heed to the $200,000 transfer to New Orleans. Ordinarily such a development would have passed unnoticed, but in these days of diminished surplus reserves and with the loss by the banks to the Sub-Treasury already this week beyond $3,000,000, every extra dollar lost is but one additional item going to make the proverbial straw that may finally break the camel's back—the camel in this case being the speculative interests in the Street, whose credits will certainly be further curtailed should to-morrow's bank statement show reserves wiped out. There is hope, however, that the showing will be better than expected.

The day's trading was distinctly dull, total dealings being little more than one-half of the total of the day previous, and with business so badly distributed that five stocks—Copper, Sugar, St. Paul, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific—contributed more than one-half of the entire transactions. Singularly enough both the bulls and the bears found consolation in this dullness. To the bulls it was a hopeful sign, because it signified that no stocks were pressing for sale; by the bears it was regarded as helpful to their cause because suggesting that the bulls either had not the courage of their convictions or already had enough stocks and dared buy no more. Conservative banking interests regarded this deadlock as essentially encouraging, pending a clearing up of the money situation.

There was very little news of consequence during the day, while of general influencing developments there was none, outside of the money losses by the bank. Some little attention was given early in the day to reports that a collapse had occurred in Canadian shares on the Montreal Exchange, but this later was shown to be exaggerated. The advance in Copper did not create much enthusiasm, nor did the rise in the stock, because around 75 there seemed to be such a plentiful supply for sale that one cynical broker declared that it looked to him as if the whole capital stock of the company was on tap and coming out.

The weakest stock on the list was Sugar Trust, which broke 3¼ points and closed at practically the low for the day on dealings in 35,000 shares. The news from Washington in respect to the Cuban reciprocity treaty was not considered favorable, and added to the unexplained items as shown in the company's annual report, tended to make the Street bearish on the stock. In addition, it is known to the bears that a weak bull account was built up in Washington on the stock in the belief that the Cuban measure would pass without delay, and hence that the issue is in a more or less vulnerable position. The change in the speculative attitude toward the security is best illustrated by the fact that whereas two weeks ago the stock was "tipped" for a twenty-point rise, it is now declared to be in for a twenty-point decline—the prophets being the same in each case.

Gould brokers were the largest buyers of Manhattan, while it was said that Mr. Keene was again turning his attention to the issue. The stock will sell to-day ex its dividend of 1¾ per cent. regular and 1 per cent. extra, and, it is declared, "will look cheap."

Southern Pacific and Union Pacific were heavy all day, but not weak, with greatest pressure in the latter. The new phase of the Southern Pacific fight was held to be responsible for the selling.

One of the helpful features of the present situation is the sold-out condition of commission houses. The line of stock being carried by these houses is said to be the smallest in many months. This means that weakly margined holders have long since passed away.

Friends and associates here of John W. Gates deny that he is bullish. They say he is bearish, and they add that they are also.

London sent over lower quotations at the opening here and followed them with sales of probably 35,000 shares. This apparent change in front (for London had bought on Wednesday) surprised many people, but not those who knew that most of the buying and the selling orders originated from this side.

Bear pressure was continued in Metropolitan, which sold down at one time over two points.

COPPER AT 15 CENTS.

Trade Interests Here Disagree with London's View That the Rise Is Artificial.

The copper markets of this country and England were more or less excited yesterday by an advance in the price of metal in each market to the highest figure in months. The rise here was to 15 cents a pound—4 cents above the lowest price recorded since the Amalgamated abandoned its efforts to maintain the price at 17 cents—while in London the advance was £2 5s. per ton, to £66 10s., this representing a rise of £20 a ton over the low price, and marking the highest figure there in a year and a half.

As a result the prices of the copper stocks on the Exchange here advanced sharply, Amalgamated at one time rising to 75¾ and closing at 74¾, for a net gain of ⅞ on dealings in 78,000 shares. Anaconda was up 2¾ points on 2,000 shares, while in the Boston market all the copper stocks were reported strong. The same was true of the copper shares in the outside market here.

Yet despite this strength, both in the metal and in the stocks, there are some people in the financial district, and there are many people abroad, who look upon the present metal price as largely fictitious and not warranted by the trade conditions, and this though it is admitted that these conditions are wonderfully improved. The foreign view (and the view of the doubting ones here) is set out by The London Standard in a recent issue in this wise:

During the past week the copper market has been flooded with statistics of the most contradictory and confusing kind. No doubt all who have a bona fide, as distinguished from a gambling, interest in the metal would be glad to have these contradictions straightened out for them. Manufacturers, bewildered between predictions of an impending copper "corner" and reports of rapidly growing production, do not know whether to cover their requirements for the coming season or to take their chance of a reaction from the present "boom." Two sets of figures challenge their attention—the fortnightly fluctuations in local supplies and the total production for the past year. The two are in obvious, not to say flagrant, disagreement, and the market has to choose between them. Which of them is the more trustworthy guide is a question that perplexes many. The fortnightly figures, however, inspire less and less confidence. They cover only a small and diminishing corner of the world's copper trade, and as they shrink in size they become more liable to manipulation. A "bull" campaign, based on fortnightly statistics, is believed to have been in progress since the opening of the year, and the statistics have shrunk so steadily as prices rose that a few weeks more of the process and there will be no standard copper left in public stores in this country. So low have public stocks become, according to some of these statistical circulars, that on one day recently, when two firms took up 1,600 tons, they left "only 2,400 tons of ordinary standard available."

A few days later the total output of copper in 1902 was stated in our own columns—on trustworthy authority—at 558,000 tons, or at the rate of fully 10,000 tons per week. If the above circular correctly represented the situation as a whole London, which still claims to be the principal copper market of the world, must have had under its control on the day in question less than two days of the world's output! It may well be asked where all the rest is going to. In their eagerness to frighten European consumers with the prospect of vanishing stocks, the "bull" clique are simply proclaiming the fact that London is a vanishing market for copper. It is for the metal brokers to consider if they are not killing their market by these semi-official announcements, issued once a fortnight, that it is drying up, and that the copper trade is rapidly going elsewhere.

In like manner the Paris L'Economiste European says, in its review of the copper market, that "it is necessary to consider that the London market is often constrained to conform to that of New York. This is the case at the moment. The advancing movement is determined more by the manipulation of Amalgamated Copper stock in New York than by the real prospects for an increase in consumption."

This pessimistic view, it may be said, is not shared by the copper trade authorities here. Mr. John Stanton pronounces it as ridiculous, saying:

"I do not think the present price is artificial. Rather I think it is the result of natural and healthy conditions. As a matter of fact, it was the biggest kind of an anomaly that when the prices of steel, coal, &c., were going up the price of copper was going down, with scarcely any one being able to tell the bottom. Happily, there was no good result to this in that the price was kept so low that consumption greatly increased, and soon overtook production. This was apparent at the beginning of the year, and it soon became clear that prices would have to be advanced. We simply couldn't produce enough.

"There has been no withholding of supplies, no 'bottling up,' or no refusal to export. The demand is legitimate and enormous. If prices go too high, of course, this will be checked, but at present there is no sign of any let-up, it being a difficult matter to make deliveries. Perhaps, of course, the rise has been hastened by buyers rushing in because fearful they might not get adequate supply if they delayed.

"I may say, however, that I am not looking for much further advance in the price now."

An officer of the United Metals Selling Company, the sales agent of the Amalgamated, said:

"The demand for copper at present is unprecedented. The situation is without flaw and without manipulation. There is nothing false to it, and there is and has been no holding back. This you can say unhesitatingly and without fear of successful contradiction."

REGULAR ST. PAUL DIVIDEND.

The Directors of St. Paul at their meeting yesterday declared the regular semi-annual dividends of 3½ per cent. each on the preferred and common stocks. No action was taken on the proposed new stock issue.

Chairman Roswell Miller, who had just returned from a Western trip, reports business in a most satisfactory condition. He says:

"Our business is really extraordinary, as indeed is the business of all the larger systems. What is more, if the Eastern lines were open it would be even better and we would have actually too much to do. As it is, earnings are better than last year, and they promise to be better still.

"The jobbing trade is very active, while general merchandise movement is heavy. To my way of thinking the outlook could not be more promising."

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

LONDON, March 13.—The Times, in its City article to-day, says the demand for money was intensified yesterday by the conclusion of the Stock Exchange settlement. The Bank of England did a very large business in loans and renewals. Discount rates began a shade easier and then hardened.

The Bank of England return shows that £515,000 has been added to the reserve, which now totals £25,688,000, the proportion to current liabilities being 19¾ per cent. higher, at 47⅞ per cent.

The Stock Exchange settlement was completed without difficulty. Business was rather more active yesterday in several departments. The general tone was cheerful, especially in foreigns and South Africans.

Consols rose 3-16 for cash and ⅛ for the account. Home rails were steady until nearly the close, when they relapsing to liquidation. Canadians were higher on the balance. The general mining market was quiet and firm.

The forward price of silver fell ¼d., to 22¼d. per ounce. The spot price was 22⅝d.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, March 12.—The pressure in the money market to-day was increased, owing to the fact that it was payday on the Stock Exchange. Discounts were quiet.

On the Stock Exchange the attendance was small. Business was inactive, but generally cheerful, and there was a recovery in many directions. An improvement in the volume of dealings is anticipated for the new account. The settlement was concluded without any difficulties, although there were heavy differences in the American section. Consols hardened and were quiet, and home rails were irregular. Americans opened firm. Operators were cautious in view of the uncertainty regarding the situation in New York. Later Americans became irregular and idle. They improved during the last hour and closed firm. Southern Pacific was quoted at 64⅝ and Union Pacific at 94⅝. Rio Tintos were buoyant. Copper was excited. The metal sold up to 66⅝, but eased off slightly on realizations and closed at 66 7-16. Kafirs hardened.

Closing prices:

Consols for money, 91 7-16; consols for account, 91⅝; Anaconda, 6⅝; Atchison, 83⅝; Atchison preferred, 100; Baltimore and Ohio, 94½; Canadian Pacific, 132⅝; Chesapeake and Ohio, 47¼; Chicago Great Western, 23; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, 172⅝; De Beers, 21½ ex dividend; Denver and Rio Grande, 39⅝; Denver and Rio Grande preferred, 89⅝; Erie, 35⅝; Erie first preferred, 68⅝; Erie second preferred, 54; Illinois Central, 143; Louisville and Nashville, 121; Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 20⅝; New York Central, 142⅝; Norfolk and Western, 72⅝; Norfolk and Western preferred, 92; Ontario and Western, 31; Pennsylvania, 73⅝; Rand Mines, 11⅛; Reading, 30; Reading first preferred, 63; Reading second preferred, 56⅝; Southern Railway, 32⅝; Southern Railway preferred, 90; Southern Pacific, 64; Union Pacific, 94⅝; Union Pacific preferred, 94; United States Steel, 36⅝ ex dividend; United States Steel preferred, 88⅝; Wabash, 28⅝; Wabash preferred, 50⅝.

Bar silver weak at 22¼d per ounce.

Money, 3½@4 per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 3⅝@3¾ per cent.; for three months' bills, 3⅝@3 13-16 per cent.

The rate of discount of the Bank of Bombay was to-day reduced from 8 to 7 per cent.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £50,000.

The sum of £10,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South Africa.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 127.30; Madrid, 33.92; Lisbon, 25.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, March 12.—Prices opened irregular on the Bourse to-day. The official list was active, especially Rio Tintos, which advanced on the rise in the price of copper. Brazilians and Argentines rose substantially. At the close stocks were firm. Rentes improved and industrials were irregular. Kafirs were very firm, being stimulated by the approaching issue of the Transvaal loan.

The private rate of discount was 2 15-16 per cent.

Three per cent. rentes, 100f 12½c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 17c for checks.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes: Notes in circulation decreased 71,400,000f., Treasury accounts current increased 54,125,000f., gold in hand decreased 5,075,000f., bills discounted increased 24,250,000f., and silver in hand increased 475,000f.

BERLIN, March 13.—Business was quiet on the Boerse to-day. Home funds were fairly steady. Chinese securities hardened. Iron shares attracted attention. Bank shares were maintained.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 52 pfennigs for checks. Discount rates—Short bills, 1⅝ per cent.; three months' bills, 2½ per cent.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

LONDON, March 12.—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes: Total reserve increased £515,000, circulation decreased £385,000, bullion increased £180,008, other securities decreased £1,474,000, other deposits decreased £2,198,000, public deposits increased £1,223,000, notes reserve increased £488,000, and Government securities increased £14,000.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability this week is 47.08 per cent., as compared with 45.34 per cent. last week.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 12.—Money rates are still high, but some improvement in the tone of the market is noted. Call loans, 5¼@6 per cent.; time loans on collateral, 5¼@6 per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 5¼@6 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5 per cent. New York funds, 16 2-32@15 cents discount. Clearings, $20,350.45; balances, $1,471,821. The foreign exchange market is somewhat firmer. Short sterling rates have been advanced ¼ cent.

The stock market was strong during a large part of the day, but it grew heavy and ran off in the afternoon when money rates were higher. The strength of copper metal made Amalgamated again a feature, and it went to 75½. It was very active. The local coppers also advanced. The news that a compromise had been reached in Osceola was favorably received. Copper Range went up and United States Mining and Centennial were strong. Dominion Iron and Steel was very weak and was sold freely. It went to 46⅝. Reports from Canada are that there is no trouble there except from money. Sugar was soft all day and sold at the lowest near the close, just above 122.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—The bear element in the local market to-day turned its attention to the Philadelphia Electric issues and waged a successful campaign, in which they received some aid from the selling of a house known to represent "inside" interests. The stock declined to 6⅝, and the 4 per cent. bonds to 65¾. An unconfirmed rumor was afloat to the effect that John Mack, an ex-Director of the company, intends forming a new lighting company and will use the Philadelphia Rapid Transit and Keystone Telephone Companies in his scheme. The Consolidated Lake Superior shares continued active. They opened weak, but subsequently rallied, although the preferred closed a point below the final of yesterday. The general market was steady to firm, a majority of the issues dealt in closing with small net gains.

Total sales, 35,206 shares and $70,000 bonds. Range of prices:

Reports of State Banks.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has issued in pamphlet form the reports of the condition of State banks at the close of business Feb. 26. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained without charge at the publication office of THE NEW YORK TIMES.—Adv.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

In Northern Securities and the copper stocks considerable strength was shown yesterday, but in other parts of the list prices were irregular with the declines about as numerous as the advances. The most important development of the day affecting outside stocks was the further rise in the price of copper which brought about an advance of 2 points in Tennessee Copper and smaller gains in several other issues in the copper group. The transactions were somewhat diminished by the loss of a half dozen issues which yesterday were removed to the Stock Exchange but there was some compensating increase in the trading in other securities.

***

NORTHERN SECURITIES rose 1½ points and most of this advance was maintained till the end of the day. The recent drop in the stock which had amounted to nearly seven points before any substantial rally occurred has apparently drawn a number of buyers to the market, and for the past two or three days the stock has been showing what seems to be a natural recovery after a heavy decline.

***

TENNESSEE COPPER was the most prominent of copper shares, being the most active and the strongest. It sold from 32 up to 34, the latter being the highest price at which the stock has ever sold. The friends of the stock argue that if the company last year with copper at 12 cents or under was able to earn, according to its annual report, more than $1.25 a share, the earnings of the company with copper at 14 cents or above will be large enough to warrant a substantial dividend. Greene Consolidated was strong but not very active. It sold as high as 27¼ and closed at 27.

***

ST. LOUIS TRANSIT.—The report of the St. Louis Transit Company, the operating company of the United Railways Company of St. Louis, was published in the Street yesterday. It shows that the gross earnings of the company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1902, were $6,452,210 and the net earnings $2,434,408. The interest and rental charges including the five per cent. dividend on the preferred stock of the United Railways Company of St. Louis, which is guaranteed by the St. Louis Transit Company, amounted to $2,732,581, so that the year's operation showed a deficit of $268,083. The report states that the earnings of the company during the first quarter of the present year show sufficient increase over those of last year to warrant the prediction that the guaranteed dividend on United Railways of St. Louis preferred can be fully met this year from the company's net earnings.

***

INTERNATIONAL SILVER preferred was made to sell as high as 53⅛, but at no time did there appear to be actual bids for the stock. It seemed to be the plan to mark the stock up on "wash" sales.

***

The principal transactions reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

AMERICAN MALTING FACTIONS.

Opposition to Reorganization Plan Based on Pending Litigation.

Some opposition has developed to the reorganization plan of the American Malting Company. One of those identified with the opposition said yesterday that the opposition was based on certain suits now pending in this State and in New Jersey against the old Directors of the company to compel the refunding of dividends which, it is claimed by the opposition, were paid out of the capital. It was stated that the amount at stake involved $1,500,000 in dividends. Another suit is pending against a banking house for the refunding of an alleged secret profit amounting to $8,240,000 in stock paid to that house for promoting the company.

If a new company should be organized, as it is claimed is intended under the reorganization plan, these suits, so it is said would fail to the ground. The objection is also made that the new plan is unnecessarily expensive and that the same objects could be accomplished with less money.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS.

Henry L. Phillips has been chosen assistant manager of the Factory Insurance Association.

W. H. Kilpatrick has been elected Secretary of the Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.

An anti-trust bill, similar to that pending in Arkansas, has been introduced in the Territorial Legislature of Oklahoma.

The Booth Tarkington Anti-Compact Fire Insurance bill, which permitted only local agents to make rates, has been defeated in the Indiana Legislature.

The Austin Insurance Company of Texas has been admitted to Arkansas, its step being actuated, it is believed, by the pending Arkansas anti-trust measure.

Cravens & Kelly have been appointed Houston, Texas, agents of the American Central Insurance Company of St. Louis and the Mercantile Fire and Marine Insurance Company.

The Aetna Indemnity Company of Hartford has established a burglary insurance department in the Metropolitan District under the direction of its Assistant Secretary, David W. Armstrong, Jr.

W. N. Kremer has been elected President of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange for the coming year, Cecil F. Shallcross Vice President, and George Jeremiah Secretary. The rates on variety stores have been advanced from 75 cents to $1.50 per $100 of insurance.

Commissioner Cutting of the Massachusetts State Insurance Department has obtained the introduction of the following bill in the Legislature of that State:

No corporation which issues insurance upon lives in this Commonwealth shall purchase the stock of any other such corporation, nor shall any such corporation or any officer or Director thereof enter into or become a member of a party to any trust agreement, combination, or arrangement or understanding whereover to acquire the control of a majority of the capital stock of any other corporation which issues policies of life insurance; nor shall a life insurance company doing business in the Commonwealth keep any deposit with or have any brokerage business with any bank, trust or other financial institution, whether incorporated or not, which by itself or any other financial institution interested in its profits controls a majority of the capital stock of said insurance company.

Large Deal in Negotiations on Park Place and Murray Street.

American News Company Said to be Interested—115th Street Lots Sold—Other Business.

Reports current yesterday were to the effect that the Billings estate had sold its property running through from 6 to 15 Park Place to 8, 10, and 12 Murray Street, and that the buyers are the American News Company. The trustees for the Billings estate declined to say whether or not the property had changed hands. So far as the American News Company's connection with the deal is concerned, it is known that that company has been looking around for a site for some time in view of the likelihood that their present building at 39 Chambers Street, running through to Reade Street, together with the rest of the block in which it stands, will eventually be taken by the city. All that could be learned yesterday, however, indicates that the Billings property is among those which have been favorably considered, but that no purchase has as yet been made. The Park Place frontage of this property is 75.3 feet and that on Murray Street 86.6 feet, the depth being about 152 feet. It is covered at present by old four and five story buildings. The American News Company will be the second of the large property owners in the block just north of City Hall Park to make provision for vacating their buildings, in case the city should decide to acquire the land as the site for a new municipal structure. The Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, now at 49 Chambers Street, bought recently the northwest corner of Broadway and Reade Street.

Walter D. Starr has sold for a client to the Mortgage Realty Company the plot, 68 by 100, on the south side of One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, 300 feet east of Amsterdam Avenue. An elevator apartment house will probably be erected on the site.

It is reported that Peter J. McGovern has bought from Lutyser & Co. the five-story flat 276 West One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, 25 by 100.

Louis Lese has bought, through Folsom Brothers, the two four-story double tenements 635 and 637 East Twelfth Street, 50 by 105.5.

Kneeland, Ireland & Co. have sold 15 East Ninth Street, four-story, high stoop house on a plot 25x92.3, for Mrs. Sophia H. Ward, to a client.

Steingut & Co. have sold for Simon Steiner to ex-Alderman Louis Minsky for $69,000 the six-story tenement, with stores, 647 and 649 East Fifth Street, 40 by 97.11.

Adolphus Ottenburgh has sold to Myers & Aronson 276 to 280 Stanton Street, a plot 60 by 75.

H. J. Sachs has sold for Cassel Cohn to Lena Baum the five-story tenement 83 Chrystie Street, 24.7 by 100.

Schmeidler & Bachrach have bought 292 East Houston Street, a four-story tenement, on lot 20 by 75.

It is reported that John Lynagh, who sold recently the dwelling 675 East One Hundred and Sixty-second Street, took in exchange property on Bathgate Avenue.

Charles H. Baechler has sold for Charles H. Grahn to James Doyle the dwelling 153 Louise Street, Van Nest; also for John Hunt to Charles Knauf, for improvement, a lot on Victor Street; also an adjoining plot to Joseph Corache for improvement.

Henry I. Geismann has sold for Mrs. Theresa Proops, 2,079 Eighth Avenue, a five-story triple flat, with store, to William Sutter; also, for Mrs. Finn and William H. Hooker, 382 and 384 Lenox Avenue, five-story flats with stores, lots 75 by 75, to Theresa Proops, for about $72,000.

Plans were filed at the Building Department yesterday by Architect C. P. H. Gilbert for a new three-story fireproof residence to be built for F. C. E. Graves at 21 West Fifty-third Street. All contracts have been awarded.

The block front on Central Park West between Sixty-second and Sixty-third Streets, was transferred yesterday by the Jai-Alai Ball Company to the Unity Realty Company.

Auctioneer Joseph P. Day announces that the sale of 520 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, originally scheduled for to-day, will be adjourned until March 19.

ALEXANDER A. ARTHUR'S DEBTS

Broker and Promoter Who Lost a Fortune in a Kentucky Land Company.

Alexander A. Arthur, a broker and promoter of 90 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities to the amount of $118,041 and nominal assets to the amount of $100,150, consisting of stocks of various companies, the real value of which is unknown. Among the assets are shares of the Cumberland Gap Park Company, $40,025; Overlook Brewing and Malting Manufacturing Company, $40,000; Middlesborough Water Company, $34,500; Alexandria Land Syndicate, $5,000, and Oconita Mining Company, $5,000.

There are 180 creditors in various cities of the United States and Europe, and the debts were contracted since 1890, principally for loans and marginal debts. Among the creditors are the Middlesborough Town and Land Company of London, $33,368; Imperial and General Trust of London, $18,[illegible]; James Alexander Forrest, Liverpool, $[illegible]; estate of James Mann, Glasgow, $[illegible]; estate of William Goyan, Glasgow, $[illegible]; Gavin Forrest, Tokio, Japan, $1,000; George W. Arthur, $5,000, and J. C. Cottrell, Cumberland Gap, $6,000.

Mr. Arthur, it is said, was wealthy at one time, but he lost a fortune in the Middlesborough Town Company in Kentucky several years ago. He was general manager of the Subway and Suburban Construction Company, which was organized two years ago to build a trolley line in Westchester County.

Receiver for Haeger Warehouse.

William F. Wilson was appointed receiver for the Haeger Storage Warehouse Company, Eighth Avenue, near Thirty-fourth Street, and the bank account in the Mutual National Bank in the name of Anna C. Haeger, by Judge Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday. The application for the appointment of the receiver was made by H. Frank Aldrich, receiver of the Colonial Trust Bank of Tacoma, Washington. The bank held a judgment against Mrs. Haeger, and had her appear in supplementary proceedings. The examination brought out the fact that Mrs. Haeger had an equity in the property mentioned and a small sum in the Mutual Bank.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

ANGELO PISCOPO.—Angelo Piscopo, dealer in dry goods and dress goods at 219 East Forty-seventh Street, has made an assignment to Antonio Scarpa without preference. He has been in business three years, and he carried a stock of about $2,000.

Out of Town.

STEVENS LUMBER COMPANY.—Temporary receivers have been appointed by the United States Circuit Court in Bangor for the Stevens Lumber Company of Fort Fairfield, Me., against which firm Charles L. James of James & Abbott, lumber dealers of Boston, has brought suit to recover money loaned James & Abbott is in the hands of receivers, being embarrassed on account of loans aggregating $350,000 to the Stevens Lumber Company. It is reported here that the Stevens Company's liabilities are $225,000, and that it is solvent, but is at present without funds to meet its obligations. J. Albert Abbott, of Boston, has appointed Hannibal E. Hamlin, Levi W. Stevens, and Charles L. James as receivers for the Stevens company.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

SWISSMAN & MALTER.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Joseph H. Skillin temporary receiver of the assets of Swissman & Malter, wholesale clothing dealers of 85 Walker Street, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on Feb. 9, on the application of Levy Goldstein, a creditor.

NEW YORK FURNITURE COMPANY.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed against the New York Furniture Company of 128 to 130 West Fourteenth Street by the following-named creditors: Louis Towbin, $41; Henry Hoffman, $80; Raymond Zeigel, $85, and Charles F. Hohman Sons & Co., $627. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and that it made an assignment on the 9th inst.

SEGALL & CO.—A meeting of the creditors of J. Segall & Co., wholesale dealers in clothing, formerly at 721 Broadway, was held yesterday in the office of Macgrane Coe, referee in bankruptcy, at 68 Wall Street, and was largely attended. The case attracted a great deal of attention and has been in litigation since November, 1901. The liabilities are more than $88,000, and the assets are $51,424. It was said yesterday that the receiver has $23,000 in cash, received from the assets. Sixty-five claims, amounting in all to $88,000, were filed. Edmund Wright was elected Trustee, but action to his confirmation was made by an attorney on a point of law and the matter was adjourned.

WALTER E. CRAIG.—Walter E. Craig, salesman, of 161 West Eighteenth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $10,014 and no assets. Mr. Craig was formerly Vice President, up to three years ago, of the Waldorf-Astoria Car Company, and that company is a creditor for $4,182, for balance of account and loans from 1897 to 1900. He has a claim against the company for an interest in the stock of the company under a contract, which the corporation denies. He says that the claim is very difficult to prove. Among the creditors of the Waldorf-Astoria are George C. Boldt, $6; Waldorf-Astoria Company, $445; Frederick Rothschild, $625; Harry S. Rothschild, $800; Rudolph Waldner, $670, and the barber, $14. Mr. Craig of Chicago is a creditor for $[illegible]000 for loans.

NATIONAL SHIP CANAL SCHEME DENOUNCED

Henry B. Hebert Says Senator Lewis's Resolution is in the Interest of Railroads—Gustav H. Schwab's View.

The canal problem of New York State took on a new phase yesterday afternoon with the issuance of an invitation to a meeting to be held at the offices of Andrew H. Green at 11 o'clock this morning for the purpose of presenting a memorial to Senator Morton E. Lewis, approving a resolution introduced by him in the Senate at Albany for the purpose of nationalizing the canals of this State which may be constructed between Lake Erie and the St. Lawrence River to tidewater.

The circular which was sent out yesterday was signed by Francis Wayland Glen, a real estate dealer, and stated that the memorial to be presented to Senator Lewis had been signed by more than 200 citizens "representing the bone and sinew, the warp and woof of the financial, commercial, industrial, and realty interests of this, the metropolis of the Western Hemisphere, and soon to be of the world."

It has been known for some time that a movement was on foot looking toward the building by the National Government of a ship canal to connect the lake ports with the Atlantic Ocean, and this, it is declared by those opposed to the scheme, has been the chief opposition met with in the agitation for the construction of the thousand-ton barge canal to the waters of Lake Erie.

Men interested in the improvement of the State canals, when seen yesterday regarding the movement for the nationalizing of the canals of the State did not hesitate to assert that the scheme was chimerical, impractical, and was intended simply as an obstruction measure against New York canal improvement, and was being backed by the railroads, whose interests were inimical to canal improvement.

MR. HEBERT'S OPINION.

Henry B. Hebert yesterday afternoon did not hesitate to express his utter disapproval of the measure.

"The entire scheme is evolved wholly in the interest of the railroads," said he, "and is utterly impracticable, as will be seen by any intelligent citizen who takes the time to consider the canal question of this State even superficially. The movement has for its sole object the dividing of canal sentiment in Greater New York. Just consider for a moment what this scheme contemplates and involves. Should the National Government be willing to build a ship canal through New York State, which, by the way, there is little danger of it ever being willing to do, how long do you suppose it would be before other States, not one or two, but all that have waterways capable of improvement, would be asking that they too be given the same improvements?

"New York State at present pays one-sixth of the entire expense of the Nation. Then she would be taxed to pay one-sixth of the entire cost of canal improvement of the country. And this could not be arranged by indirect taxation. It would come from the pockets of the merchants and of the farmers. New York State is quite able to take care of herself, and this is one reason why she should not sell her canal property, but this scheme does not even contemplate selling these enormously valuable properties. It means that she shall give property worth hundreds of millions of dollars to the Government for nothing.

"Another result of a ship canal, such as is contemplated by these obstructionists, is this: The result of a ship canal across New York State would be the fulfillment of a dream that has for years been in the mind of every Westerner—to make the lake ports seaports. The idea is to have vessels loaded at Liverpool, for instance, to go through the Harbor of New York, and thence to the lakes. This would make of Duluth as much of a seaport as the Harbor of New York. Providing this were possible, which it is not, we claim that the cost of a steamer of large tonnage to get through the canal would be so great as to be practically prohibitory, compared with a thousand-ton barge, owing to delay in transit. It is not a business proposition in any sense.

"Furthermore, a vessel built on the great lakes would not be in any way suitable for the Atlantic. There are so many impossibilities in the way of the fulfillment of such a scheme that it becomes apparent that the entire movement is simply for the purpose of confusing the canal question. I do not know what interests are behind it, but I have a very good idea on the subject."

Gustav H. Schwab, Chairman of the Committee on Agitation of the Canal Association of Greater New York, was even more explicit and emphatic in his objections to the nationalizing movement, which he unhesitatingly asserted was inaugurated solely for the purpose of dividing canal sentiment in this city.

"I consider this movement to promote or discuss a ship canal to be nothing more or less than an obstacle in the way of canal improvement in the State," said Mr. Schwab. "A ship canal, in my opinion, is entirely and absolutely out of the question, for a number of very weighty reasons. First, if it is intended to float ocean steamers from the lake ports through the canal and across the Atlantic Ocean, a ship canal of the depth of thirty-five feet must be constructed, involving an enormous outlay that may be considered prohibitory. Such a canal would necessitate the corresponding deepening of all the large lake ports, as well as the draining of the channels connecting the lakes, and the entire work of constructing the canal and the proper deepening of the connections could not be undertaken for less than $500,000,000 or more. I do not believe that any one considers that the National Government would ever seriously take up such a proposition.

SHIP PLAN IMPRACTICABLE.

"It is stated by some of the promoters of the ship canal that their ideal is a twenty-one-foot canal described in a recent report of the Deep Waterway Commission. This plan, I understand, is to bring the lake carrier through to New York Harbor, and there transfer her cargo to the ocean steamer. This is a beautiful plan. The only trouble is that it will not work. No lake steamer could go alongside the ocean steamer in New York Harbor to transfer cargo, as the conditions here do not permit it.

"The cargo on a lake steamer would have to be transferred into an intermediary barge, whence it would be conveyed to the ocean steamer by means of floating elevators. The lake steamer now transfers her cargo of grain into a shore elevator at Buffalo, where the transfer charge is lower than at New York. A change, therefore, involving a transfer of cargo from a lake steamer into intermediary vessels, and thence to the ocean steamer in New York, would mean a considerably higher cost in the transfer of grain, and the ostensible object of cheapening the transportation charge would be defeated.

"A ship canal, whether of twenty-one feet or thirty-five feet depth, would be a practical failure, as no expensive lake or ocean steamer could afford to spend the time required to traverse it, and the cheap canalboat would always be able to underbid the costly steamer on a ship canal.

"Aside from the considerations I have just mentioned, the State of New York would, in my opinion, never agree to turn over the Erie Canal, or any waterway through the State, to the National Government. It could not afford to do so. Does any one suppose that the representatives of other Atlantic States and the Gulf States would particularly care to develop New York's commerce at the expense of their own ports? I think Mr. Hewitt's warning words, uttered in the Chamber of Commerce in 1898, against any surrender of New York waterways, should be heeded, and I cannot believe that any considerable number of citizens who have given the matter careful consideration will, after doing so, follow this phantom of a ship canal."

TWO CANAL BILLS REPORTED.

Davis-Bostwick Measure Out—Also Proposal for a Commission for a Federal Waterway.

ALBANY, March 12.—The Davis-Bostwick bill, providing for the issuance of bonds to the amount of $101,000,000 for a thousand-ton barge canal, was reported favorably to-day by the Canal Committee of the Senate.

The bill is changed in details as to estimates in conformity to the latest report of State Engineer Bond, but as to route and other matters the measure is the same as originally outlined.

Senator Davis said that the early report of the bill was one of the results of Tuesday night's Senatorial conference, when a programme of tax legislation was mapped out which is designed to raise a sum sufficient to pay for all canal construction.

There is another canal proposition now in general orders, having been reported favorably from the Senate Finance Committee. It is for the appointment of a commission to consult with Federal authorities relative to a deep waterway. It is favored by the anti-canal men.

Senator Davis said he would move to advance his canal bill to third reading on Tuesday next.

GAS COMPANY SUED.

Plaintiff Says Supply Was Cut Off Because He Refused to Pay a Bill He Didn't Incur.

A test suit has been brought against the New Amsterdam Gas Company to recover $5 a day under Chapter 66 of the laws of 1895 for the failure of the company to supply gas to Walter E. Cansdell, an engineer of the Germania Bank. Attorneys for Mr. Cansdell yesterday appeared before Justice Joseph in the Seventh District Municipal Court and obtained an order to examine the records of the corporation. The trial of the action will come up on March 25.

The small sum of 70 cents has caused all the trouble that has brought the action about. Mr. Cansdell declares the gas company shut off the gas without good cause, and simply because when he took the premises at 337 East Thirteenth Street he declined to pay 70 cents which the New Amsterdam Gas Company declares was owing to it by the former occupant of the premises.

Mr. Cansdell took the premises on May 19, 1902, and on the following day his wife went to the office of the company, made application for gas to be supplied and deposited $3. The gas was turned on that day, but a few days later Mr. Cansdell received a bill for the 70 cents for gas said to have been supplied to the premises from April 7 to May 20, before he had moved in. When he refused to pay the company threatened to cut off the supply. After that time he paid three bills, aggregating $ for gas supplied between May 20 and Aug. 7. On the last mentioned date the supply was cut off because the 70 cents still was unpaid. The supply was not turned on again until Oct. 4, and during the interim Cansdell was compelled to use oil.

The chapter of the law under which suit is brought provides specifically: "If the corporation shall refuse or neglect to supply gas or electric light, as required, such corporation shall forfeit and pay to the applicant the sum of $10, and a further sum of $5 for every day thereafter during which such refusal or neglect shall continue."

"FLATIRON" BUILDING SUIT.

Defendant Denies the Structure Is a Public Nuisance.

Gilson N. Vincent, who is suing the owners of the "Flatiron" building for $5,000 for damages which he declares have been caused to his store in the Bartholdi Hotel block by the reason of the manner in which the building directed the strong winter winds against his big plate glass windows and thus broke them repeatedly, has been served with the answer in the action.

Mr. Vincent in his action declared that the peculiar shape and size of the "Flatiron" building were responsible for this damage. When the windows of his store were blown in on Nov. 23 and Dec. 5 he declares that other damage was done to his stock and to the hardwood floors. R. C. Babbage, who is the attorney for the Fifth Avenue Building Company, owners of the structure, in his answer denies that the building is a public nuisance and denies also that he has any knowledge to form a belief that the wind is deflected with force and violence against the store occupied by Mr. Vincent.

Mr. Vincent is empathic in his declaration that he will go on with the suit and test the law in the case. He declares that not only has his property been damaged but that on windy days his business is injured by persons being kept away from his store.

INSURANCE FRAUD CASES.

Grand Jury Returns Fourteen Indictments Against the Alleged Conspirators.

The Grand Jury returned indictments yesterday against a number of the Italians who are accused of having been involved in the extensive swindles perpetrated on various insurance companies by the means of false proofs of death and the substitution of bodies. The indictments are all for grand larceny. Fourteen have been placed on file against such of the conspirators as have already been placed under arrest. There are said to be a number of others against members of the gang who have not yet been captured.

Four indictments were returned against Joseph Trepani, who is declared by Assistant District Attorney Krotel to be one of the ringleaders in the conspiracy. He is in the Tombs in default of $9,500 bail. He is charged with having been concerned in at least nine cases where insurance was obtained by fraudulent means. Trepani conducts an undertaker's shop at 2,231 First Avenue, in the heart of "Little Italy," and his part of the work was to supply the bogus bodies on which claims were collected and act as a witness on the false proofs of death that were presented to the companies.

One of the others against whom an indictment has been found is Bartolomeo Cirino, at whose barber's shop, at 2,007 Second Avenue, the "dummies" used by the swindlers were said to have been examined for insurance, where the meetings of the conspirators were usually held, and where the spoils were divided. Cirino fled from the city, forfeiting $3,000, a few weeks ago.

Among the persons indicted are also two physicians, Dr. Albrecht Loewit of 1,833 Lexington Avenue and Dr. Francesco Macci of 2,072 First Avenue. Both are out on bail. They are charged with abetting the conspiracy by furnishing false proofs of death. The others are Louisa Cicone, Casimiro Ciconi of 2,000 First Avenue, Maria D'Alessio of 2,330 East One Hundred and Eighty-second Street, and M. G. Pasca, beneficiaries under fraudulent policies on which insurance was collected.

Those indicted will be arraigned before Judge Cowing in the Court of General Sessions to plead to their indictments to-day.

OLD NEWSWOMAN'S FORTUNE.

Mrs. Kraft, Who Sold Papers in City Hall Park, Left Over $7,000.

Dorothea Kraft, the old newswoman who for years sold papers in City Hall Park and who died on Tuesday, was worth in excess of $7,000. This is shown by the filing of her will for probate in the Surrogate's Court yesterday. The money is on deposit in various banks, and four bank books, with a pocket book containing $16, were found in her room at 434 Pearl Street. All of her money is left to her son, Frederick Joseph Kraft.

From her shabby appearance Mrs. Kraft always was supposed to be a poor woman. She lived alone in wretched rooms, was a cripple, and always stood at her post selling papers in the bitterest of weather.

Ex-Cashier Cosgrove's Liabilities.

Charles E. Cosgrove of 203 East Eighty-ninth Street filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday, with liabilities to the amount of $15,991 and assets nominal, consisting of a cause of action against the American Surety Company for alleged false imprisonment, the value of the claim being estimated in the schedules at $1,000. There are only two creditors, the American Surety Company, $15,391 on a judgment taken against him on Aug. 6, 1901, and the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, $600 liability on a bond. Mr. Cosgrove was formerly cashier of the Stewart, Howe & May Company.

Firm Aids Mrs. Collins.

The firm of Cowperthwait & Sons of Chatham Square and Harlem has canceled and issued a receipted bill for the balance of an account for household effects on which but two payments had been made by Mrs. Mary Collins of 206 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, whose husband was killed while at his work.

STOCK EXCHANGE DROPS INTERNATIONAL SILVER

Demand That Voting Trust Be Dissolved Was Refused.

Present Method of Preserving Control of the Company the Result of an Experience with Interests Allied with Gen. S. Thomas.

The securities of the International Silver Company, which were formerly quoted in the unlisted department of the New York Stock Exchange, have been ordered stricken from the list because the voting Trustees, who hold a majority of the preferred stock and indirectly control a majority of the common stock, declined to dissolve the voting trust.

There had not been any dealings in the stock on the Exchange for some time, which, it is said, was due to the fact that the Stock Exchange Governors had notified the voting Trustees either to dissolve the trust or to have the stocks of the company taken off the list. When the time given under the ultimatum expired, it was found that the voting Trustees had taken no steps to comply with the demands of the Stock Exchange Governors, but that they had preferred to keep the voting trust and thereby control of the company. Thereupon the stocks were ordered withdrawn from the unlisted department.

The International Silver Company's control is held in a queer way. When the United States Silver Company succeeded in getting control of the International Silver Company largely through the efforts of interests identified with the late Gen. Samuel Thomas, the men who had been in control bought the control of the United States Silver Company from the Thomas interests, paying therefor in bonds and preferred stock of the International Silver Company. In the treasury of the United States Silver Company was then a majority of the common stock of the International Silver Company. This amount of stock being tied up in the treasury, the men who had regained control of the property decided to still further safeguard their interests by forming a voting trust for the preferred stock, under which a majority of that stock was deposited with the Trustees, and voting trust certificates were issued. Thus the floating supply of stock was so reduced that a corner could have been manipulated in it.

Thomas & Thomas, fiscal agents for the company, say that an attempt was made to have the voting trust certificates listed, but this request was declined by the Stock Exchange.

The last sale of the preferred on the Exchange was at 41½ on Dec. 31, 1902, and of the common, an odd lot sold at 10 on Jan. 7, 1903. During the last two weeks the stocks have made their appearance in the outside market.

There has, however, been but one trade in International Silver common in the outside market. This trade was made about two weeks ago, 100 shares selling at 10. It was not until Wednesday that the preferred stock was dealt in on the curb, but on that day trades were made in nearly a thousand shares between 45 and 52, and yesterday there was more trading at a further advance. But after the sales the stock was offered at 52 with practically no bid.

The voting trust certificates for the preferred stock made their appearance on the curb, together with the preferred stock itself, and considerable comment was caused by the difference in the prices of the two issues. While the actual stock was selling above 50, the voting trust certificates were being traded in at 20.

Within the past ten days the price of the debenture bonds of the International Silver Company has fallen from about 98 to about 90, and practically no support was given to them, the sale of less than $50,000 of the bonds being sufficient to cause this eight-point drop.

LEGAL NOTES.

TEACHERS' RIGHTS.—An act, providing for the deduction of a percentage from the salaries of public school teachers to provide a pension fund for their benefit, is held, in the case of Hubbard vs. State ex rel. Ward (58 Lawyers' Reports Annotated, 654) to be unconstitutional either for lack of uniformity, or as the taking of private property from one citizen for the benefit of another.

A rule of a Board of Education, providing for a deduction of one per cent. from the salaries of all teachers, to be paid into a fund for the purpose of providing annuities for teachers becoming incapacitated by reason of long service, is held, in State ex rel. Jennison vs. Rogers (58 Lawyers' Reports Annotated, 663) to be unauthorized and void.

NEGLIGENCE OF CHILDREN.—The act of an employe in charge of a gravel train who, after having tried in vain to prevent urchins from hanging to the end of the train by warnings and threats, catches one of them and lectures him, is held, in Palmisano vs. New Orleans City Railroad Company (59 Lawyers' Reports Annotated, 405) not to render the master liable, where the child, upon being released, runs blindly in a direction converging with that of a coming car, and, in collision with the car, is injured.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF DEBTS.—In an action on a promissory note brought by M. Groh's Sons against Feldman the defense was that certain fixtures, for which the note was given, had been sold by the plaintiffs under a chattel mortgage. The chattels, the defendant claimed, were at the time of the taking fully worth the amount of the promissory note. Their taking, it was argued, without any sale, acted as a full satisfaction and discharge of the debt. Justice Scott yesterday decided that the rule is not quite so broad as contended by the defendant. While it is true that when a mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged chattel, after failure to perform the condition of the mortgage, the debt is thereby satisfied, if the chattels be of sufficient value, there must be evidence of that fact. "I feel constrained to hold," said Justice Scott, "that the taking and retaining possession of the mortgaged chattels, after default, was a payment of the debt to the extent of the value of the chattels taken." Justice Scott gives the plaintiffs the right to show either that the chattels were not taken or that they were worth less than the amount of the note.

Let's strike a new note.

Yet the new featherweight Stetson soft hat, the best product of that famous maker, is inexpensive at $12.

So in every other one of the Stetson soft hats at prices down to the standard $5 grade.

$5 SHOES $3.50

No $3.50 shoe is worth more. But because we must move we are selling our regular $5 men's and women's shoes for $3.50. You can see the $5.00 value—the superior quality and workmanship.

Better grades proportionately reduced.

Children's and youths' shoes reduced.
